31 Dead, 100 Hurt In Train Wreck!

COACHES LEAP RAILS WHILE BIG STORM IS RAGING

Pitiful Scenes At Accident Near Hackettstown, N. J.; Debris Buries Many

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., June 16.—Thirty-one persons were killed, perhaps more, at least 100 injured in the wreck today of a special train from Chicago to Hoboken, N. J., on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western at Rockport, three miles from here.

Reports this afternoon from hospitals in towns and cities surrounding the scene of the disaster showed that the death list was mounting steadily from figures arrived at earlier in the day.

Three reasons for the fatal wreck were advanced in a tentative report made by Robert White general superintendent of the road, to the state board of public utilities. They were:

1—That lightning struck the rails.

2—That sand and debris were washed on the tracks by heavy rain.

3—That the road bed had been washed out.

The victims were on their way to New York to sail this afternoon on the Republic of the United States line for Bremen.

The engine and the two front coaches leaped the rails. The other three coaches remained on the tracks.

Most of the victims were asleep when the accident occurred at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

The wreck occurred during the height of the storm. Rain was pouring down, lightning flashed and thunder boomed. Then came the smash. At daylight steam still poured from the broken pipes from the engine. Railroad workers and volunteer rescue workers searched among the wreckage for hours.

The first eye witness story of the fatal crash was given International News Service by Miss Mabel White, daughter of Chief of Police L. C. White of Hackettstown, and one of the first to arrive at the scene. She was a spectator at a fire in the lumber yards in Hackettstown when news of the wreck at Rockport was received.

"I went at once to the scene three miles away in a friend's automobile," Miss White said. "We got there about half an hour after the wreck occurred.

Pitiful Scenes

"The scene was pitiable. Women, some of whom could not talk English, were going about in circles, wringing their hands and crying as if their hearts would break.

"Big, strong men, their husbands and friends, went about patting them on the shoulders and trying to comfort them.

"One woman, whose child, a girl, was scalded to death, was inconsolable.

"The two front coaches and the

Testifies

MISS ISABELLE POPE, fiancee of Billy McClintock, who gave testimony today at Chicago in the trial of William D. Shepherd, accused of McClintock's murder.

Dead Boy's Sweetheart Says She Made Agreement With Heirs To His Estate

CHICAGO, June 16.—Miss Isabelle Pope, fiancee of Billy McClintock, today admitted under cross-examination in the trial of William D. Shepherd, accused of murdering Billy, that she had made an agreement with the heirs to the McClintock estate that if young McClintock's will was broken she and they would share on an even basis.

She said that it was agreed Mrs. Shepherd would be "taken care of."

"Our understanding is that Billy left the bulk of his estate to the Shepherds and that there is a contest by some of the heirs in Iowa and that you have entered into an agreement with these heirs under which you are to get something?" asked Stewart.

Objection by the state was overruled.

"You will have to ask my lawyer about that," replied Miss Pope.

Judge Lynch directed her to answer.

"You know, don't you " asked Stewart.

"Yes, I understand it's to be a fifty-fifty split," replied Miss Pope, "with the exception that $100,000 is to be set aside for Mrs. Shepherd."

Miss Pope admitted she had an ill-feeling toward Shepherd but not against Mrs. Shepherd.

Stewart concluded his cross-examination and court adjourned for lunch.

"You loved Billy?"

"Yes."

Miss Pope, on the witness stand, thus bared her love for Billy.

Sweet-faced, serious, a hint of suppressed tears in her eyes, a sad smile now and again upon her lips, Miss Pope submitted calmly, steadfastly and with girlish simplicity to the cross-examination from Scott Stewart, chief counsel for the defense.

She told of how they first met, how first she passed him with a nod as she did all the other boys in high school. She met the Shepherds in 1921, she said.

"Billy loved his parents?"

"I don't think he did. He didn't care for them like a boy does his father and mother."

"They loved him?"

"I don't think they did."

Stewart produced the transcript of the coroner's inquest proceedings and showed where she had said that "Billy loved his mother and she loved him."

Miss Pope resumed the stand this afternoon. She was questioned about the dinner on the South Side November 3, 1924, and said her cousin and his fiancee were present and neither of them were made ill by the oysters. It had been claimed by the defense that McClintock was made ill from eating oysters at this dinner. She was then excused, after being on the stand four hours.

TAX REDUCTION PROGRAM IS UNDER WAY

President Coolidge Insists Department Heads Cut Financial Demands

By R. S. THORNBURGH
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Coolidge today formally launched his 1926-27 economy program, aimed at drastic cost-cutting policies in government which may be reflected in tax reduction in the Sixty-ninth Congress.

At the president's direction department heads were requested by Budget Director H. M. Lord to attend the annual meeting of the government's business organization on June 22.

Plans to secure greater efficiency and economy for the coming two years will be outlined, according to Lord.

Coincident with the calling of the economy session came indications of a clash in Congress between the administration and advocates of tax reduction who feel government revenue can be cut more than $500,000,000.

Avoids Open Break

While Secretary of the Treasurer Mellon will submit no specific plan to Congress and will avoid an open break on new legislation he opposes revenue reduction exceeding $300,000,000. A greater cut would force the government to borrow money to meet expenses, experts said.

The treasury revealed that the surplus for 1926 will be approximately $250,000,000, compared to the preliminary $373,700,000 estimate. Partially balancing this loss, however, was the probability that the 1925 surplus will exceed the estimate of $67,000,000, by $50,000,000.

The treasury is against a revenue cut greater than the surplus. Mellon also opposes applying payments on foreign debts directly to tax reduction, holding that it is better economy to reach taxes indirectly by applying payments to the public debt. A change of treasury policy would require an amendment to the law.

The government reduced its operating expenses by $120,665,000 from July 1, 1924, to June 14, compared with the same period of 1923-24. Ordinary expenses were $7,551,000 higher, the cut being due to reduced public debt interest.

Urges Reductions

The agricultural department increased its expenditure $26,582,000; the navy $14,271,000 and the war department $9,848,000. Led by the veterans' bureau with $22,371,000, five departments cut expenses.

President Coolidge is expected to ask department heads to use the pruning knife to get under the $3,267,000,000 estimated costs for 1926 appropriations, for which plans have already been made.

The president will fix a maximum ordinary expenditure for the government in 1927.

Bathing Girls' Walk Is Bad, Asserts Doctor

SANTA CRUZ, June 16.—The bathing beauties are beautiful except when they walk. And then, listen to this: They have a lolly-pop stature and loose jointed walk.

Echoes of the California beauty pageant which came to a close here Sunday afternoon arose at today's session of the twenty-fourth annual convention of the California Osteopathic association in a talk by Dr. E. G. Bashor, president of the organization.

Dr. Bashor was discussing the "diagnosis of pelvic pathologies." He presented Neptune's daughters as fine examples of physical beauty and yet lacking proper posture, balance and grace when out of the water. "The bathing beauties we saw the other day are wonderful physical specimens of athletic development," said Dr. Bashor, "but when they are standing upright they have a lollypop stature and loose jointed walk. Take the swimmer out of the water and the shoulders slump forward, the walk becomes a loose jointed affair, all the grace of form displayed in the water is gone. We should teach our girls proper posture and balance."

TWO NATIONS PREPARE TO HIT RIFFS

France And Spain About Ready For Joint Action In Morocco Warfare

PARIS, June 16.—The long talked of French and Spanish joint action against the Riffs in Morocco will soon be under way, Minister of Marine Borel told the cabinet today.

French warships now are in Spanish waters preparing to work with Spanish ships in naval movements against the tribes.

Two French destroyers already are patrolling the Riff coast, blockading it against incoming shipments.

Leaves For Conference

At the same time Louis Malvy, who conducted the discussions with the Spanish a month ago accompanied by a delegation, left for Madrid for the Franco-Spanish conference starting Wednesday.

The entire joint campaign in Morocco will be threshed at the Madrid conference, according to present plans.

Premier Painleve, who arrives back in Paris today from Morocco, made three suggestions to the cabinet. They were:

First, a rigorous Franco-Spanish blockade off Riff ports to check all smuggling of arms.

Second, the disciplining of General Colombat, who will be relieved of his command because of his over-hasty evacuation of Ouezzan.

Third, the appointment of General Daugan as commander-in-chief of all the French troops in Morocco with Marshal Lyauety remaining as resident general.

SPEEDY DEATH SOUGHT FOR DR. YOUNG

Authorities Plan To Hurry Trial Of Dentist Who Killed His Wife

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The county grand jury returned in indictment today, charging Dr. Thomas W. Young, Los Angeles dentist, with the "gas murder" of his pretty wife, Grace Young, society matron.

The "scientific murderer," who gassed his wife to death with somnoform, deadly dental drug, was immediately taken to justice court for arraignment.

"Dr. Young told me he expected to get a lot of money and he entertained romantic notions about me," Miss Dorothy Leopold, the dentist's assistant, told the grand jury, relating how the killer had won her confidence.

Miss Leopold testified the dentist told her his wife had gone east to get a divorce.

She said she did not love Young and denied she had ever been engaged to marry him.

Charles Patrick Grogan, Young's stepson, the million dollar heir, Mrs. Young's father, F. R. Hunt, and brother, Earle Hunt, also testified before the grand jury. Detectives related the dentist's confession of the "gas death" and the discovery of Mrs. Young's body, wrapped in tar paper and covered with cement at the bottom of the cistern in the dentist's Beverly Glen summer cabin, where Young had hidden it.

Prosecution Preparing To Hurry Trial Of Dr. Young

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—While the county grand jury began deliberations today on the evidence which is expected to send Dr. Thomas W. Young, Los Angeles dentist, to a speedy death on the San Quentin gallows for the confessed "anaesthetic murder" of his wife, Grace Grogan Young, Charles Patrick Grogan, 18-year-old stepson of the slayer, emphatically expressed his affection for Dorothy Leopold, the dentist's pretty 24-year-old assistant.

"I think as much of that girl as if she had been my own mother," Patrick, heir to a $1,000,000 estate, declared. "I'm strong for her. She has been so good to me I love her."

Miss Leopold admitted she had a like affection for the youth.

"I did care for him but there was no boy-and-girl love affair. I just comforted him—he was so lonely," the girl said.

ENGLAND ACTS IN SLAYING OF BRITON

International Complications May Result; Woman Is Heroine In Attack

SHANGHAI, June 16.—The slaying of William McKenzie, British subject, and an employe of the municipal electricity department, and the wounding of Miss Mary Duncan, is believed to have been the outgrowth of a long-standing dispute between the Chinese and the municipal council over the extension of the foreign settlement roads into Chinese territory.

The Chinese claimed such extensions were an "infringement of their sovereginty." Rabid propaganda, including direct appeals to Chinese volunteer troops to forcibly halt road work recently, has been circulated by the student union.

The British consulate, it is understood, is lodging a strong protest, demanding the capture and the punishment of the murderers.

Although wounded in both arms, Miss Duncan took over the wheel of the automobile in which they were riding when McKenzie fell dead, and drove toward the settlement amid a hail of bullets.

The laborers' association is calling on all of China to join in a memorial demonstration June 30, all shops, factories, schools and government offices being asked to suspend business, half-mast flags and organize demonstrations.

Advices today said that Xiukiang, scene of a recent outbreak, is quiet and that 600 missionaries in the vicinity are apparently safe.

Chinese Speculators See Close Of Shanghai Strike

SHANGHAI, June 16.—Chinese exchange speculators started feverish buying of gold bars this afternoon, following rumors that an understanding will be reached tomorrow which will end the general strike which has tied up Shanghai for the past two weeks.

It is understood the Chinese negotiators are holding out for their three principal demands, namely, punishment of police, indemnity for the victims killed in the student demonstration and a return of the international mixed court.

Foreign delegates conferred, but declined to make a statement on progress of a settlement. It is understood the foreign negotiators are willing to make some concessions, possibly a return of the mixed court.

'DYING' MAN DISAPPEARS FROM LOCAL SANITARIUM WITH AID OF DAUGHTER

John W. Worthington, Under Sentence In Fraud Case, Linked With Huge United States Mail Robbery, Is Missing

John W. Worthington, the "Wolf of La Salle street," was sought by federal and county officials today, following his mysterious disappearance from the Glendale Sanitarium, 1509 East Wilson avenue, last Wednesday afternoon, where he was supposed to be dying.

Sentenced in Illinois to serve a term in federal prison on charges of using the mails to defraud, Worthington obtained permission from federal authorities to come to California for his health, and with their consent, entered the local sanitarium. Recently he was charged in Los Angeles with grand larceny and was accused by federal investigators of having been linked with the $2,500,000 mail robbery in St. Louis in 1923.

Last Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to sanitarium officials today, his daughter, Miss Alice Worthington, who has been residing at 2100 Chattanooga street, Hollywood, called at the hospital in a taxi. After a short visit with her father, she asked permission to take him for a "short ride." Neither Worthington nor his daughter have been heard from since.

When he failed to return to the sanitarium after a few hours' absence, Dr. H. W. Wollmer, of the sanitarium, notified the federal officials in Los Angeles. Officers have searched continuously since then through Los Angeles, Glendale and surrounding territory, but have been unable to find a trace of the former Chicago broker.

Although Dr. Anthony, representing the federal officials, has made repeated examinations of Worthington and has each time reported him dying, with "but a few months to live," Dr. Wollmer declares he has been gradually regaining his strength and has shown improvements since entering the sanitarium.

When he was brought to the sanitarium he was desperately ill and was given the insulin treatment, used in extreme cases. He had been in bed for weeks but a short time ago he was able to be about and to take short walks, indicating a gradual improvement in his condition.

Takes Personal Effects

All of Worthington's belongings except one trunk, too large to take without causing an investigation, disappeared with him, hospital authorities said today. They also recalled that just before he was last seen, Worthington cashed a certified check for $1000.

Without hospital treatment, however, his condition would become critical, in the opinion of physicians today. When he was sentenced in 1923 to serve three years in Leavenworth penitentiary medical authorities in Chicago stepped in and Worthington was declared dying.

He was one time president of the Chicago clearing house, and was convicted of using the mails to defraud in a gigantic bucket shop scheme. Granted a stay of execution of sentence, Worthington came to California for his health, which improved up to the time his faithful wife became ill.

When Mrs. Worthington, who had fought for her husband's freedom in a long court battle,

VERDICT HOLDS DENTIST AS MURDERER

Coroner's Jury At Inquest Accuses Dr. Young Of Killing His Wife

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The final step in the preliminary building up of the case against Dr. Thomas W. Young, dentist, today stands completed, following the action of a coroner's jury yesterday in finding Mrs. Grace Young, wife of the accused man, "came to her death by strangulation at the hands of her husband." The verdict of the coroner's jury paves the way for District Attorney Asa Keyes to appear before the grand jury and ask an indictment in the "murder of science."

The inquest was held at the Strothers & Dayton mortuary in Hollywood, where Mrs. Young's body was taken after it had been removed from the cement-capped cistern in the basement of the Young summer cabin in Beverly Glen. The finding of the body followed the directions given by Dr. Young in the first of a series of confessions Saturday night.

The death of Mrs. Young, according to the jury's verdict, was caused "by the use of lethal gas, probably somnoform, applied from a vial and through a rubber bag into the mouth."

Dr. Young was not present at the inquest. He remained in his cell at the county jail, where he smoked innumerable cigars, while jailors kept a close watch on him to forestall any attempts at suicide. The only witnesses to testify were Earl Hunt, brother of the murdered woman; County Autopsy Surgeon A. F. Wagner; Frank Hunt, aged father of Mrs. Young; Special Investigator Chas. Reimer of the district attorney's staff, and County Enforcement officer George Contreras.

Earl Hunt identified the body as that of his sister, making the identification from articles of clothing he had seen her wear before her death. Frank Hunt, the father, related conversations between Dr. Young and himself relative to Liberty bonds and cash after Mrs. Young's disappearance.

There were no marks of violence on the body, no gunshot wounds, nor bullet holes, County Autopsy Surgeon Wagner told the jury.

Reimer related the confessions made by Dr. Young and told of the investigations carried on by the district attorney's office. Contreras told about finding the body in the cement-capped cistern in Beverly Glen.

Divorce Trial Move By Wife Is Revealed

Mrs. Grace Young Planned Separation, Claiming Husband Was Cruel

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The theory that contemplated divorce action by Mrs. Grace Young might have prompted her husband, Dr. Thomas W. Young, to strangle her with deadly dental gas and then throw her body in a cistern was advanced by investigators today, following disclosures of pending legal action on the part of Mrs. Young.

Three weeks before her husband killed her at their Beverly Glen cabin, Mrs. Young sought to divorce him, it was learned today. During the latter part of January she visited a Los Angeles attorney and instructed him to file complaint against her husband.

Mrs. Young told a startling story of cruelties alleged to have been committed by her husband. In a rage he had torn the clothes from her body, she declared, and had pinched her viciously. She further charged that her husband staged "wild parties," at which "women of questionable character were guests."

There was "another woman," Mrs. Young alleged. Dr. Young was desperately in love with this woman, she said.

"But," she added, "she can have him so far as I am concerned. I don't envy her in the slightest. If she knew him like I do, she would change her mind."

Mrs. Young declared she wanted no alimony, explaining in detail the stipulations of her first husband's will which provided her an income of $800 monthly.

"All I seek is happiness," Mrs. Young told her attorney. "The two years that I have been his wife have been a terrible nightmare. I really do not feel safe with him, and he is so cunning that I wouldn't put anything past him."

After she had reviewed her story, Mrs. Young's attorney said he doubted if she could obtain a California decree without corroboration of her testimony. He advised her to go to Reno or Paris and establish her legal residence there. When he first learned of Mrs. Young's disappearance, the attorney decleared that he supposed she had taken his advice

Boy's Pitching Arm Is Used To Halt Burglar

The accuracy of a Glendale youth's "pitching arm" has placed Thomas Lafferty, burglar, with a record that extends over twenty years, behind the walls of San Quentin penitentiary for from "five years to life."

When Lafferty was discovered looting the home of E. L. Harrington, 560 West Dryden street, several weeks ago, he leaped through a side window and broke through a hurriedly formed posse that had surrounded the house. He was rapidly outdistancing his pursuers.

On a corner, Harry Shaidell, 560 Glenwood road, and Charles Caballaro, 610 South street, were playing ball. Lafferty sped past, with the posse well behind him. Shaidell is a good ball player. He picked up a sizable rock and, putting all the strength in his baseball arm behind it, threw at Lafferty. The rock struck the fleeing man in the side and checked his speed. He was overcome in an instant and taken over by the police.

In Superior Judge Arthur Keetch's court Lafferty pleaded guilty to burglary and asked for probation. It was denied.

DENTIST TRIES TO COMMIT SUICIDE

Wife Slayer Attempts To End Own Life With Investigator's Gun

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Desire to take his own life overpowered Dr. Thomas Young, confessed slayer of his wife, Grace Young, late yesterday, when he tried to secure the .45-caliber revolver from the hip holster of Fred Darley, special investigator of the district attorney's office, as they motored to the Young cabin in Beverly Glen. The alertness of Darley frustrated the suicide attempt.

Investigator Darley was instructed by District Attorney Asa Keyes to take the prisoner back to the scene of the crime. Dr. Young and Darley occupied the rear seat of the automobile, with the driver alone in the front seat.

Suddenly Darley was conscious of the fact that the prisoner became very talkati e and that he continually tried to get closer on the seat to the officer.

Attempt Discovered

Next Darley felt a pressure on his right hip, where his .45-caliber revolver was in its holster. At the same time Dr. Young was talking faster, attempting to draw Darley's attention to surrounding scenery.

Reaching down for his revolver, Darley found Dr. Young's left hand almost on the weapon, his fist half clenched. Darley pulled the gun lose and switched the holster to the other hip.

"You can't get away with that, doctor," said Darley.

Dr. Young's only answer was his usual smile and a sigh.

engine had gone off the track. The windows of these coaches, both metal, by the way, were shattered, and many of the injured were inside, groaning. They were being treated by those who first got to the scene.

"Most of them were scalded, as well as injured in the wreck.

Screams and Groans

"I had the presence of mind to take with me from Hackettstown a bottle of olive oil. I went through one of the windows o the overturned coaches and applied the oil to the burns of th injured.

"The injured were in terrible pain. They screamed and groaned

"Passengers from the three coaches that remained on the tracks did all they could to help the injured. But, as they were without medicine or bandages, they were unable to give much assistance until after the first of the nurses and doctors arrived.

"The injured were take in private automobiles and in ambulances to Hackettstown, Morristown, Washington and Easton."

The wrecked train, according to some of the passengers, was making fast time when the accident occurred.

Many Scalded

The first two coaches were filled with steam immediately after the impact, scalding many of the passengers.

The engine ploughed through the sand and dirt for thirty feet after it struck the switch. The two coaches immediately behind piled up on top of the engine.

The killed included the engineer, fireman and brakeman of the train, and a man, woman and child, passengers in the first car. There were 182 passengers on the train.

SPEEDY DEATH SOUGHT FOR DR. YOUNG

yers similar to that which marked the trial of Leopold and Loeb, Chicago's "perfect crime" slayers.

While three alienists for the state examined Young in his jail cell, the self-confessed murderer employed attorneys despite his statement after his arrest that he would not make a fight to keep off the gallows, began to battle for freedom.

The state alienists reported their preliminary examination showed no signs of insanity in Young. A complete report will be filed today.

District Attorney Asa Keyes announced the death penalty would be demanded for Young. Keyes will present his case against the dentist, believed to have killed his pretty wife for her money and to have plotted the murder of his 18-year-old stepson, Charles Patrick Grogan, in order to get the youth's $1,000,000 estate, to the grand jury today or tomorrow.

"In all my experience I do not recall a single case where the facts were more atrocious or brutal than those in this Young murder," Keyes asserted. "I intend to place the matter before the grand jury at once, bring Young to a speedy trial and demand the death penalty.

"The intimate details of this murder are so morbid and grewsome as to stagger the imagination."

Doctors Victor Parkin, Paul Bowers and Louis Webber, alienists employed by the state in the trial of Kid McCoy for the murder of his sweetheart, Teresa Mors, were called to examine Young in an effort by the state to block an insanity plea, Keyes said.

Young's attorneys, headed by John L. Richardson, attended the inquest yesterday afternoon over Mrs. Young's body and heard the reading of the confession made to detectives by the dentist and the coroner's jury verdict which found the woman came to her death through murder at the hands of Dr. Young. They also were present when the three state alienists questioned the dentist in his jail cell.

SERMON DEVOTED TO AGED PEOPLE

Interesting Church Service Dwells On Promises For Old Folk In Bible

Sunday was the scene of two very interesting services at the Glendale Presbyterian church, the first being in honor of children's day and the second, immediately following, in honor of people of 70 and over. The decorations were peculiarly beautiful and elaborate, consisting of a series of white pillars crowned with masses of flowers and joined in a series of floral arches.

The children's day program was written by Keith L. Brooks and consisted of a beautiful story interspersed with appropriate songs. The story was read by Miss Anita Fletcher and the songs were sung by the various classes.

Preceding his sermon, Rev. Edmonds paid a glowing tribute to the flag in commenting on Flag day. His sermon subject was "God of the Aged" and his text is found in Isaiah 46:4 and the first clause of verse 14 of the 92nd Psalm "And even to your old age, I am He; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you," and "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age." He spoke, in part, as follows:

"The doctrine of the text is the constancy of God's love, its perpetuity and its unchangeable nature. God declares that He is not simply the God of the young saint, or of middle age, but the God of the saint of all ages, from the cradle to the tomb. 'Even to old age, I am He.' The doctrine is two-fold; God the same whatever our age; God's dealings with us both in Providence and grace; His carryings and deliverings are alike unchanged.

Nature Gives Proof

"That God is unchanged is abundantly proved by Nature. Look at the sun; no change there since God set it to rule the day. The rocks are the same; trees outlive the centuries. Are not the stars the same, the rain and the dew, time and tide, seed-time and harvest. The rainbow in the cloud attests that He has not forgotten His covenant. Then is it strange or hard to believe that He should be unchanged toward you for seventy, eighty or even ninety years?

"God's word is the same—unchanged since I first learned to read it at my mother's knee—and it will remain unchanged if I live to be as old as some of you—yes until He comes. His promises which cheered us in our young life are the same today. We sing as our fathers before us sang:

" 'How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent Word.'

"The experiences of the saints are the same. When first you knew Him, He was the Chiefest—and today, He is ever more and more precious. From all this and more, we are assured even to old age, He is the same.

Memories of Youth

"We note that old age is a time of peculiar memory, memories of youth, of friends of other days, of lessons conned in childhood, wars long past, afflictions, the long past but not forgotten wedding-day, the first child, adversity, prosperity, loved ones gone before to the 'better land that is fairer than day and through it all, the Friend that sticketh closer than a brother.'

"Old age, too, has peculiar hopes. Hope as an anchor, hope undefiled and that fadeth not away. Changes may come, storms arise, but hope forever arises strong and true, particularly in the heart of the aged saint—'All my hope on Thee is stayed, All my help from Thee I bring, Cover my defenseless head With the shadow of Thy Wing,' and under the shadow of His wing, hope sings her song of trust.

"Again old age is a time of peculiar responsibility, one of which is testimony. I may say 'I have never the righteous forsaken'—but when an old saint of 80 or thereabouts makes such a statement, there's power in that testimony.

"Another duty and privilege of the older saint is the comforting and encouraging of young believers. Every old person should be an adept at this in a spirit of gentle love and patience.

"Then again, old age has its peculiar blessedness. I envy the aged saint who is almost home. Older people seldom have doubts. This blessedness manifests itself in fellowship with Him Who is invisible. Christian on his way to the Celestial City experienced this blessedness. He had gotten beyond Doubting Castle; the Giant Despair no longer reached nor intimidated him; he had passed the Valley of the Shadow and now he has visions of Beulah Land, sweet Beulah Land. He hears voices, 'Behold thy salvation cometh.' Thus as life nears the journey's end, the blessedness of fellowship grows sweeter and more real. 'Even to your old age, I am He.'

Time of Harvest

"Old age is the time also of harvest and fruit bearing. 'He shall bring forth fruit in old age.' Remember the old apple trees, the old cherry tree, the old grape vine. Was ever fruit so perfect and so sweet as that that grew on the old trees?

"A word, in closing, to three groups: First, to you young people; do you want a safe investment, a sure recipe for happiness in old age? Here it is: A bank may break, but Heaven cannot. Rock may dissolve, but not the promises of God's Word. If you build on Christ, you are secure forever. If your life be hid in Christ, 'even to old age, He will carry you.'

"Be you in middle life, bearing the heat and burden of the day?' Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all good things shall be added unto you.' Give your heart to G honor Him and He will honor you.

"A final word to these aged friends. We thank God for you and your faith. Don't be melancholy, don't grumble, don't think of yourself too much. Don't be impatient with young life. Let your faith be known to all men. Speak often of God's love and faithfulness to you. Meditate much upon Him and live in an atmosphere of prayer and praise. 'And the peace of God that passeth all understanding shall keep your heart and mind by Christ Jesus.' "

KIWANIANS LEAVE TOMORROW FOR BIG CONVENTION

FLYERS BRAVE DEATH, VISIT STRANGE LAND

Bob Hausler, Field Secretary of Aero League, Soars Over Unknown Area On Aerial Exploration Trip

By P. M. CONNELLY
Of The Evening News Staff.

Bearing strange tales of a land, many parts of which have never before been visited by civilized man, Bob Hausler, noted airman and the founder of the Tri-State airways between Southern California and Albuquerque, New Mexico, was in Glendale today ready to take up his duties as field secretary of the Western Aero league.

Hausler, accompanied by Frank Clark, flyer from Clover Field, returned to Southern California last Saturday after a history-making flight over the route of the Tri-State airways through California, Arizona and New Mexico.

That trip took them across the jagged peaks of the Grand Canyon near Flagstaff, over the painted desert on the edge of the Hopi reservation, the uncharted and hertofore unvisited lava beds in the mesas of the southwest and the recently discovered ruins of Pueblo Buenito, ancient Aztec city near Grants.

They Face Death

Braving possible disaster and death, the intrepid flyers soared over the mountain tablelands where access excepting by air has been for centuries impossible. On the flat tops of the mountain peaks they landed, traveling on foot to many strange places heretofore unknown to man.

To Dr. T. C. Young, president of the Western Aero league and Howard I. Wood, secretary, and a representative of The Glendale Evening News, Hausler unfolded the story of his trip for the first time this morning.

Hausler left Los Angeles in his airplane just following the Winslow, Ariz., air meet, held May 16 and 17 to celebrate the completion of the Tri-State airways.

The story of his flight is one of romance and adventure rivaling anything in history or fiction. It is filled with incidents pathetically or humorously interesting and tales of intrepid grit that will take their place with the stories of early pioneer days of the ox-cart and the struggles of a great people in crossing the western plains.

Hausler and his pilot, Clark, made their first stop at Amboy, insignificant desert town some fifty miles out from San Bernardino. In population and area the little village is indeed insignificant, but in its part as a link in the Tri-State airways it is a center of prime importance.

There are only fifty white inhabitants in Amboy, yet the men of this village rallied to the support of Hausler when he first told them of the need of an airport in their locality if the then projected Tri-State airways was to be completed. Materials and labor were donated by the villagers, sturdy desert folk. The field was secured along the railroad and in close proximity to an oil and service station. Facilities for getting airplane parts from Los Angeles in the short-

Evening News Ads Result in Quick Action

Inability to sell or rent houses in Glendale is not due to the failure of the owners to advertise, declares J. W. Usilton, realtor, of 142 North Maryland avenue, in reporting results of advertising in The Glendale Evening News classified columns. Mr. Usilton reports that he inserted two classified ads on a house located at 656 Fairmont street. One ad offered the house for sale, the other was a "for rent" ad, he said. The next day after the two ads appeared, he received seven answers, two persons wanted to buy the house and five wanted to rent. He deemed it advisable to rent instead of sell. The ads appeared exclusively in The Glendale Evening News.

250 CHILDREN FLEE FROM MADMAN

Crazed With Liquor, Bus Driver Runs Amuck At Burbank Convent

Arrested after he ran amuck in the Mother Cabrini Preventorium near Burbank and drove nearly 250 children from the building after threatening them with a club, Frank Zaro, chauffeur, employed by the Preventorium, was to be taken to the psychopathic ward of the county general hospital.

Crazed with bad liquor, according to Burbank police, the man ran through the home shortly after 10 o'clock last night, wielding a club and shouting oaths. One sister who attempted to resist him was knocked down. Several windows were smashed and some furniture was broken by Zaro.

He was captured after a battle with police officers, including Chief of Police Long, Sergeant Ackerly and Patrolmen Jones and Butler. They were hurriedly called by attendants after the man, demented with poison liquor, had narrowly missed killing or severely injuring with the swinging club some of the children as they lay huddled in terror in their beds.

Becomes Madman

Zaro has been employed for several months as a bus driver to take the children on outings, and has always apparently been a quiet man with an affection for the young ones in his care. But last night when Zaro was taken, manacled and chained, to the Burbank jail, he was a veritable madman.

He had been away during the early part of the evening, police said, and returned to the Preventorium after the dormitories were dark and the children asleep. Police are making an investigation in an effort to learn where Zaro obtained the liquor.

The series of brilliant events will in October open with a program by Vincent Ballester, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera Co. He is a native of Spain. His program will be the attractive beginning of seven musical events featuring artists of national and international prominence.

It is the aim of the Music club to guarantee $4,000 by July 1, and to this end Mrs. Jones has teams busy this month in an intensive membership drive. FARMER TOLD GOOD TIMES ARE NEAR

Secretary Of Agriculture For United States Predicts Prosperity At Hand

By GIL A. COWAN
For Southland News Service.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—"Farmers are due to return shortly to prosperity equal to that existing before the war," is the message of encouragement brought to California from the nation at large by Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine, now on tour of the state.

This morning he was a guest at a breakfast given in his honor at Long Beach, while yesterday afternoon he addressed the Southwest Economic conference at the Biltmore hotel under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. This afternoon the secretary continues on his motor trip through the southern part of the state, arriving at Fresno late tomorrow.

Secretary Jardine is speaking informally practically everywhere he goes, spreading the gospel of business methods in agriculture which he believes paramount, and urging the judicious reduction of those crops which heretofore have caused heavy financial loss because of overproduction.

The cabinet officer is particularly interested in California's cooperative marketing systems and he will observe at first hand the work done by the raisin growers, the fig, peach and apricot associations in the interior valleys, as well as familiarizing himself with the citrus growers' methods, as he believes that cattlemen, grain growers and all other agriculturists will have to follow the progressive examples set by this state.

Solidify Southwest

At the economic conference, now in session at the Chamber of Commerce, glowing pictures of future prosperity are painted for the southwest, Former President William Lacy of the Chamber of Commerce sounding a keynote when he declared that the Colorado river project and the Los Angeles harbor development are the two outstanding factors in solidifying the southwest.

Sessions will conclude tomorrow, leaving an outline for activity on the part of the Chamber of Commerce and other civic and business groups during the next several years, which will be augmented by future conferences.

Los Angeles Kiwanis club will hold its regular Wednesday meeting at the Santa Fe station in Los Angeles an hour before the big special leaves. A program of entertainment for their delegates and members who attend the convention has been arranged.

According to the present schedule for the Kiwanis Special, it will arrive at the Grand Canyon Arizona, at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. Here the train will be side-tracked and the entire day spent in sightseeing. From 7 to 9 p. m. delegates will be entertained with a moving picture show. Following that a Kiwanis meeting will be held in the lobby of the Hotel El Tavar, which has been donated by the hotel management for the use of Kiwanians.

The following day, June 19 delegates will be entertained in Albuquerque, N. M., by the local Kiwanis club. Featured on the program will be a sixty-piece Indian band. June 20, the train will arrive in Kansas City at 6 p. m., and until 10:30 o'clock that night delegates will be the guests of the Kansas City Kiwanis club at a banquet and dance to be given at the new Kansas City Athletic club recently completed.

Sunday, June 21, the delegation will arrive in St. Paul, Minn., the convention city. Californians will be assigned to the Raddison hotel in Minneapolis, which will be California headquarters during the convention. Friends of California delegates can reach them at this address.

Abe Leach of Oakland, governor of the California-Nevada district, has appointed an entertainment committee to function aboard train en route to St. Paul. Each day regular Kiwanis meetings will be held in the diners. There will be songs, speeches and, as usual, fines for those who break the rules.

Last, but not least, the inimitable Jimmie Smith of Tujunga and his famous one-man band will be one of those present. Jimmie is going as a zone representative. He has a new repertoire of songs, one new song for each club in Zone 3, and it can be safely said that wherever Jimmie goes, the folks are going to hear plenty about San Fernando valley. California Kiwanians have not yet forgotten how "Jimmie" blocked the sidewalks and streets at Denver last year.

Undersheriff To Talk At Realtors' Meeting

Undersheriff Eugene Biscailuz will tell members of the Glendale Realty board of workings of the Los Angeles sheriff's office in an address before the board tomorrow noon at the Egyptian Village cafe. James W. Everington, Jr., secretary of the Glendale Traffic commission, will outline purposes of that body to the realtors tomorrow. The meeting will start at 12:15 o'clock, President William L. Twining, presiding.

Prized Pet Disappears, Whole Family Grieves

A large tan and white Scotch collie dog named "Mark" has wandered away from his home at 322 Road's End, and the A. D. Timmons family are grieving the loss of a prized pet. Mark, who is a thoroughbred animal, especially intelligent and a constant companion of his master, had just recovered from poison he ate three months ago. Mr. Timmons is trying to locate Mark through the classified advertising columns of The Glendale Evening News.

Character Building

The habit of thrift may seem a purely practical thing, and yet it has more influence upon CHARACTER building than most other things. One who is continually afflicted with worry about tomorrow and possibly with debts that he is not sure he can pay when due has not the inclination to have higher and happier thoughts.

There are few things that will generate a feeling of self-respect more than accumulated surplus taken out of earnings and reserved for possible less fortunate times. Nothing else can give one the feeling of independence and worthiness that comes from the knowledge that the work of past years has something to show for it. No head is held so high, no eye looks out upon the world with such confidence as those that belong to one who has realized that his duty is not fully performed in only providing for today. There is a tomorrow for everyone. It may be good or it may be bad. If it is a good tomorrow, he will have greater happiness from it if he has saved a part of his earnings. If it is a bad one, he will be prepared to meet it.

This bank has a moral obligation to the community of inducing every citizen, young and old, to save a part of what he earns. We want everyone in this city to be the better citizen that he can be with comparative financial independence.

THE SCHOOL CURRICULUM

There are always those among us who are ready to criticise the school curriculum and tell the educator just where he is making his mistake. When it comes to the work of the doctor, the lawyer, the engineer, the builder, we say, "Every man to his trade," and we leave the job in his hands. But we have not yet learned to place confidence in the trained intelligence of our educational experts.

It is not so easy to determine what should or should not be taught in the schools, for, according to Edward C. Broome, superintendent of schools of Philadelphia, and chairman of the commission on the curriculum of the National Educational association, it takes a generation to determine the effectiveness of a system of teaching. This sounds reasonable. The present generation can give a fairly satisfactory answer as to whether they were taught the things they ought to know thirty years ago, for they have had the opportunity to test the value of that teaching in their own lives. Likewise, the present generation will be competent thirty years from now to estimate the worth of the education they are receiving in the schools today.

The purpose of the school is to prepare the student for life and since in any age it is impossible to predict the nature of the social and industrial life thirty years hence, the educator does not have a cut and dried rule to go by in planning the school curriculum.

Educators agree that the time for overhauling the school curriculum is here, courses of study having grown in a haphazard way as a result of the tremendous expansion of knowledge during the last fifty years. "This task," says Mr. Broome, "cannot be performed by legislators however, well-intentioned they may be. Legislators are composed of laymen who do not understand the child mind and its possibilities and limitations. Likewise local school boards are not in a position to perform the task. The work must be done by trained and experienced educators, and it must be done not by isolated and independent efforts but by co-operative enterprise."

TRADITION OF PROGRESS

The announcement that there is no longer a government land office in Kansas, inasmuch as all the government lands in that state have been taken up, and that similar conditions prevail in Missouri and Iowa, not only indicates the growth of the middle west, but brings to mind that our entire country has been settled in a comparatively few years.

A hundred and fifty years ago a few hardy souls from among the colonists were venturing fearfully toward Ohio and Kentucky, then an unknown and unexplored wilderness.

If we can imagine the vast expanse of territory, west of the narrow strip along the Atlantic coast which comprised the thirteen colonies, as it appeared then—miles of virgin forest, unexplored rivers, mountains and desert, uninhabited save by the native savage tribes, the buffalo feeding on the lush wild pasturage and an abundance of all kinds of wild life; and then think of the teeming cities today, the cultivated fields, the pathways of steel and concrete that traverse the country and cross and recross each other, the schools, the libraries, the museums, the desert watered and blooming; we must marvel at what has been accomplished in such a short time.

Europeans say our country is uninteresting because we have no traditions and no background. True, we have no centuries-old ruins, but we have a background of sturdy pioneers and a tradition of progress. We cannot help that we are young. We are proud that we have grown exceedingly and that we have not yet lost the enthusiasm of youth.

WINKING AT LAW BREAKERS

Deploring the hypocrisy of responsible citizens who wink at the law, a writer for a Los Angeles newspaper says that she is ashamed to admit that she has not frowned upon the hospitality of those who patronize the bootleggers. "More than once," she says, "in the guise of hospitality, almost the whole of Los Angeles—and other cities too—has conspired to openly flout, ridicule and scorn the law of the land."

This writer does well to call attention to the danger of flouting and scorning the law but she greatly exaggerates when she says that almost the whole of Los Angeles or any other city has done this thing. We hear a great deal about violations of the Eighteenth Amendment but "almost the whole" of the people do not do it, by a long shot. The great majority of the people did not touch liquor before prohibition, they do not patronize the bootlegger now, and they do not condone the acts of those who do. They never have to consider whether they shall put the law of hospitality above the law of the land because they do not move in circles where the laws of the land are made a jest.

There is a small class of radical prohibitionists in the country, people who feel very strongly on the subject, and there is a small class who feel that they cannot exist without liquor and who break the prohibition law. But between these two classes is the great mass of the people who, as far as they are personally concerned, do not give the matter any thought, for it does not touch their lives at all.

BRYAN INTERESTING IN CONTRASTS

Nothing so quickly breaks down the morale as monotony. In every-day life, as in the drama, it is contrast that affords interest. Perhaps this is why William Jennings Bryan is still going strong after a quarter of a century in the news. He came into the limelight as a political radical. Today he is perhaps the biggest figure in the country in the fight for religious conservatism. In his younger days he was the advocate of the poor and won the title of the "Great Commoner." Today he is rated among the millionaires. His celebrated silver tongue which could not win him the presidency of the United States was very effective in influencing people to buy Florida real estate.

Whatever our opinion of his political views or religious convictions we must admit that, although Bryan never reached the White House, he is a remarkable man. Very few presidents have been able to keep in the limelight for so many years.

THE STAGE DIRECTOR!

Taxation

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The underlying difficulty with out present system of taxation is that it starts from the wrong basis. A man should be taxed on what he spends and not on what he earns.

The former tax would increase thrift and restrain extravagance, while the latter tax penalizes success.

If Henry Ford has built up a great business that nets him a hundred million dollars a year he is entitled to the usufruct of that business. None but the envious and discontented would gainsay this.

By fortuitous concourse of ability and good luck he has achieved the success that many of us have failed to get. To all the profits of this success he is entitled, for he uses it in making others successful.

Unfortunately in taxation we have proceeded upon the principle of getting money wherever it was found. And upon the corollary to this, that those people in possession of great wealth have no right to it; it belongs to the people.

It is the theory of the robber and not the honest man.

President Coolidge is commendable in his efforts to cut down the expenses of government. But no efforts to cut down expenses can do away with the necessity of paying the enormous debt left us by the war.

This debt could easily be paid by the levy of a tax on sales, and not on earnings. Such a tax would not be felt by the great mass of the people and would be easily collectible.

At the present time it is necessary for the government to keep a great army of clerks and experts in order to check up on how much every man earns.

There are many injustices and evasions in the carrying out of this scheme. If we are appalled by the extent to which the Volstead law is evaded, we should be still further appalled by the extent of the evasions of the tax law.

Taxing sales means taxing something that is open, unconcealed and unconcealable. It would be a fair levy upon the whole ability of the country. It would conserve capitalism and encourage capital to invest in productive enterprises, whereas the present system discourages capital and drives it into all sorts of non-taxable byways.

Horoscope

This is an unimportant day, according to astrology. Early in the morning Uranus is faintly helpful, but later in the day Mercury is adverse.

Again it is well to stick to routine work and to practice careful business methods, for thrift will be of importance as the autumn approaches.

Messages of a disappointing character are likely to be received under this rule of the stars, which makes for more or less anxiety regarding financial matters.

There is a sign indicating that world finances will be much discussed and that individuals as well as nations will be concerned with money problems.

The Moon today enters Taurus a sign ruled by Venus and governing the throat and neck.

Tension that unfits one for important decisions is likely to be felt while this configuration prevails and it is well to postpone big initiative of every sort.

It is important to observe health rules while this direction of the stars prevails.

Calmness and deliberation in all activities and a determined optimism will bring good results under this sway.

Uranus is in a place supposed to encourage the distortion of moral codes and inclination toward dishonesty.

Intrigue and even treachery may be unusually common in the next few months in which many extraordinary crimes are to be uncovered.

All the signs appear to promise good for the future, since reactionary tendencies in matters that are beneficial are forecast.

The seers foretell that men will cease to desire strong drink and women will give up the use of cosmetics.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year that will be rather commonplace, but there should not be any attempt at new enterprises.

Children born on this day probably will enjoy lives that are uneventful, but bringing plenty of contentment. These subjects of Gemini probably will be versatile in talents and able to win success.

Today's Poem

A SONG OF FLIGHT

While we slumber and sleep
The sun leaps up from the deep
—Daylight born at the leap!—
Rapid, dominant, free,
Athirst to bathe in the uttermost sea.

While we linger at play
—If the year would stand at May!—
Winds are up and away
Over land, over sea,
To their goal wherever their goal may be.

It is time to arise,
To race for the promised prize,
—The Sun flies, the Wind flies—
We are strong, we are free,
And home lies beyond the stars and the sea.

The Best of Advice

By CLARK KINNAIRD

If only Huxley were living to testify at the Scopes trial in Tennessee!

With the confidence born of the same faith in science's doctrines as imbues the gentlemen who are assailing those doctrines, he would say:

"Thoughtful men, once escaped from the blinding influences of traditional prejudice, will find in the lowly stock whence man has sprung the best evidence of the splendour of his capacities and will discern in his long progress through the Past a reasonable ground of faith in his attainment of a nobler Future."

He would add:

"And after passion and prejudice have died away, the same result will attend the teachings of the naturalists regarding the specialists respecting the great Alps and Andes of the living world—Man.

"Our reverence for the nobility of mankind will not be lessened by the knowledge that Man is, in substance and structure, one of the brutes; for he alone possesses the marvelous endowment of intelligible and rational speech, whereby, in the secular period of his existence, he has slowly accumulated and organized experience which is almost wholly lost with the cessation of every individual life in other animals; so that, now, he stands raised upon it as on a mountain top, far above the level of his humble fellows, and transfigured from his grosser nature by reflecting, here and there, a ray of the infinite source of truth."

Let us keep in mind that the development of exact natural knowledge in all its vast range, from physics to history and criticism, is the consequence of the working out, in this province, of the resolution to "take nothing for truth without clear knowledge that it is such;"

To consider all beliefs open to criticism;

To regard the value of authority as neither greater nor less than as much as it can prove itself to be worth.

Who's Who

Taxes, a subject which forces itself more or less unwillingly into the lives of every one, forms the chief interest of William R. Green, chairman of the ways and means committee, of the House of Representatives, who is now in Paris. Mr. Green has been attending the meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce committe on double taxation, presided over by Professor Thomas S. Adams, of Yale. The committee will report to the congress of the International Chamber in Brussels shortly on methods of preventing taxation in two separate countries of the same property or income.

But double taxation is only one of the phases of a complex subject which Mr. Green is studying in Europe. The ways and means committe begins framing the new revenue bill about October 15, and the chairman hopes to pick up pointers in England, France and Germany which can be incorporated into the American bill. The English system of collecting and settling tax accounts is particularly adaptable to the United States, Mr. Green believes.

"The taxpayer in England seems to have less difficulty in making his return," he says, "and little controversy with the government over the amount of tax. Part of this may be due to the fact that the English are able to give their revenue agents greater authority in the matter of adjusting controverted tax matters than we are, but I hope something may be learned which will help to remove the complexities and controversies which arise over our present law."

Mr. Green, although a native of Connecticut, is a member of Congress from Iowa. He was born at Colchester, in 1856 and was educated at Oberlin college. He was admitted to the bar in Iowa in 1882 and began to practice in Dow City. In 1894 he became judge of the district court, which position he held until 1911, when he resigned on his election to fill an unexpired term in the sixty-second Congress. He has been re-elected on the Republican ticket ever since.

When not in Washington or investigating government problems abroad, Mr. Green lives in Council Bluffs. Just before sailing for Europe he visited the Virgin Islands and Porto Rico to make a survey for President Coolidge.

PROTEST WHOLESALE ARRESTS IN ATWATER

Action of L. A. Police Department on Glendale Boulevard Arouses Ire of Business Men in District

With nearly 500 motorists under arrest, charged with violation of the traffic ordinance for driving on the wrong side of Glendale boulevard in the Atwater district, a protest against the tactics used by the Los Angeles police department in making the wholesale arrests was being planned by business interests of the district today.

At the same time means of eliminating the necessity of "either taking the wrong side of the street or traveling several blocks out of the way" were being considered.

In the district there are crossings over the Pacific Electric tracks which run down the center of Glendale boulevard, only at two intersections. At half a dozen other street intersections along the boulevard there are no crossings over the right-of-way. Persons emerging from the side streets are obliged to travel in one direction only, and in the event that they wish to go in the opposite direction, must go several blocks out of their way to make the cross over.

Business men of the district today renewed their agitation for lowering of the Pacific Electric right-of-way as a result of the tremendous number of arrests within the past seventy-two hours. Nearly 500 motorists have been tagged during that time by a squadron of motorcycle officers detailed to the district "to break up the wrong-side-of-the-street habit."

Protests to the police officials brought forth the reply that the great number of accidents along the boulevard caused by motorists driving on the wrong side of the street prompted their action in ordering wholesale arrests.

After a partial let-up the motor officers swooped down on the district again last night, arresting several scores of persons on their way home from work in Los Angeles. At times traffic was held up for more than a block while violators, lined three and four deep, were given tickets by the motor officers.

L. A. Contractor Buried

George C. Beldan, Los Angeles contractor, who operated extensively in the Atwater district, was buried at Forest Lawn Memorial park yesterday afternoon. Funeral services took place at 2 o'clock, at the Little Church of the Flowers. Beldan ended his life with a gun when he became despondent several days ago.

Predicts District Growth

A. C. Bollinger, extensive subdivider of Southern California, on a visit to the Atwater district yesterday afternoon, expressed his astonishment at the growth of the district in recent months, and predicted further advance in real estate and building in the section. Business property in particular is due for further advance he predicted. With completion of Los Feliz road improvements added interest should be manifest in that vicinity, he said.

Masons Attend Meeting

Royal Arch Masons of the Atwater district witnessed the initiation of Mayor George E. Cryer, Judge John W. Gates and William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, in Los Angeles last night. The Atwater delegation was headed by R. M. Sanders and numbered many of the prominent business men.

Gold Crowns AND Tin Cans

There is no better or more serviceable piece of dental work than a properly constructed and fitted gold crown, and none so misused.

Gold crowns made by the office girl and placed in the mouth in fifteen minutes by a high speed tin can artist cannot be expected to be more than a tomato can shoved over the tooth and onto the gums.

It takes time and skill to make and fit a gold crown properly and for such the usual fee is $12 to $50 (and worth it to the patient.)

Our price, $6 and $8, is based on work in volume plus a small profit, and believe me folks, no piece of dental work done here is permitted to leave the office till as near perfect as skill and care can make it.

Flyers Brave Death In Visit To Strange Land

est possible time were arranged. Thus Amboy did its part in the establishment of the great airway, and it was here that Hausler made his first stop on his trial flight over the completed route.

New Landing Fields

From here the flight was made to Kingman and from Kingman to Seligman, a distance of sixty miles. From Seligman to Williams is fifty miles and from there to Winslow a hop of ninety miles was necessary. All of these towns have, in accordance with the original request of Hausler, and under his supervision, established up-to-date landing fields equipped with every available convenience for the transcontinental flyer.

On the last leg of the trip to Winslow, near Flagstaff, the flyers diverted their course to take in the Grand Canyon. Plans to make regular sightseeing trips with tourist-passengers over the Grand Canyon, flying out of Williams, Ariz., are under way. Hausler will shortly establish this service for private individuals who will take over the work during the coming summer season.

"There is little danger in flying over this section of the country," Hausler said. "In no place is the aviator more than five miles from ampleflat ground on which to land. This will make the sight-seeing tours practically safe and will be a big inducement to the tourists."

The next leg of the journey to Holbrook took the flyers over the Painted Desert and gave them a new view of a spectacle unsurpassed.

Colorful Experiences

From Holbrook it is a fifty mile jump to Grants where the interest of science has centered for the past year since the discovery near there of the lost city of the early Aztec race.

A side trip over the great lava beds, for centuries a barrier to human passage, brought the aviators their most colorful experiences of the trip. Huge craters of extinct volcanos yawned their warning as the flyers passed. Mesas atop great masses of lava, never before visited by man or animal, became the landing fields for their sturdy aircraft. A great ice cave, frozen the year round, with chambers as big as the average room of a modern dwelling, was visited. The strange old Pueblo Buenito itself said by scientists from the Smithsonian institute who are at work among the ruins, to be older than the tomb of King Tut, was also visited.

Here the flyers found the great three and four story structures of white stone, preserved in perfect by the flows served in perfect condition by the flows of lava that buried the city centuries ago.

Pushing on farther into the great lava waste, Hausler and his companion flew over the mesa where only a short time ago, a race of Indians, cut off from all communication with the world for hundreds of years, were discovered by Smithsonian representatives. Here lives a race, unlike other Indians of the region, on the top of a mesa from which it was impossible to gain egress because of the great flows of lava that surrounded it on all sides. Explorers found the natives, subsisting on what they themselves raised on top of the mesa and without any knowledge of a world greater than their own little village. They spoke an unknown language. They raised their own stock and manufactured their own farm implements.

After their exploits over the treacherous lava beds, where in many instances they challenged death and destruction and at other times faced starvation had they been forced to land in isolated spots from which reascent would have been impossible, Hausler and Clark flew on to Albuquerque.

Plans New Route

Hausler made another announcement upon his arrival here today. Within a few months, he declared, he will have completed his string of airways as far as Kansas City. Here the route will connect with the line already established by the air mail, to Chicago, and will give an unbroken air highway from coast to coast. Arrangements for establishing landing fields between Albuquerque and Kansas City at regular intervals, similar to the route now in existence over a like distance between Los Angeles and Albuquerque, have been made by Hausler who will direct the work of establishing the new fields.

With such a route, a transcontinental air highway will have been established and Southern California will be in a position to compete for direct air mail facilities, the southern route through Kansas City and Albuquerque being shorter, more accessible and far less dangerous than the present route taken by the mail planes, Hausler said.

Hausler has signed a contract to do the field work for the recently formed Western Aero league. He will maintain his headquarters in Glendale for this purpose and will visit by plane, every city in western America in the interest of the league during the next few months.

More than 500 visiting Druids have registered, and more are expected for the last two days of the convention. All hotels have been filled to capacity and many of the delegates have been quartered in private homes.

A parade was staged by visiting delegates headed by the Municipal band last night, with Chief of Police Long, and Dr. A. E. W. Yale as grand marshals. At a short program held at the municipal band stand, near the city hall, opening introductions were made by Past Arch W. S. Furman; the addreess of welcome by Judge Watson, and response was made by Grand Noble Arch A. H. Williams. Others who talked were Grand Secretary C. A. Gugliemoni, San Francisco; Miss Mid L. Fisher, arch druidess of the Burbank circle; Josie Parodi grand arch druidess, and A. E Dufar of the Burbank Chamber of Commerce.

A display of fireworks and dancing were closing events of last night's entertainment.

Says Permit Granted For Water Diversion

Editor The Evening News:—In your article in issue of June 11, "Water Rights in Verdugo Are Good." It was no doubt a matter of surprise to "small stockholders" that this goodness was ever questioned. The opinion of W. E. Evans of the law firm of Evans, Pearce & Campbell, was asked by the directors of Verdugo Canyon Water Co. in the interest of the city of Glendale.

For years "small stockholders" in the Verdugo Canyon Water Co. have been unable to obtain any use of their water within the city limits or to dispose of it by sale; their only privilege being to pay assessments for its maintenance or have pipe stock sold, usually bought by the city at a few cents a share.

Stockholders of the North Glendale Reservoir & Pipe Co., are entitled to run water through the company's pipe (governed by their number of shares in pipe line) and no more. Edward M. Lynch purchased water rights and pipe stock in Verdugo Canyon Water Co., and asked that this 175 shares of water be diverted into the system of the North Glendale Reservoir & Pipe Co., in which he also owns 147 shares of pipe stock with water rights to be taken out at a point east of Campbell street.

A satisfactory arrangement was made at the first meeting and a lease satisfactory to both parties was unanimously agreed upon for a period of five years without any threat to "sue for writ of mandamus."

Being taken out at east end of pipe line and at night, no interference with rights of North Glendale Reservoir & Pipe Co. will result. Permission having been granted unanimously by both companies for the "diversion" of the water, if it is not "diverted" who is refusing?

D. E. FULLER, Secretary.
North Glendale Reservoir & Pipe Co., also Director in Verdugo Canyon Water Co.

BREADS Part 2)

How much bread should we eat

Bread, while it does have a small proportion of protein and fat, is essentially a starchy food and therefore an energy food, and it is an exceedingly good energy food. How much energy food we need depends altogether on our size, age and physical activities. Of two persons of the same physical activities, the larger one needs more energy food, as he needs more of all kinds of food. It takes more to run a big engine than it does a small one.

It is not well to have too much starchy food at a single meal, so if you have potatoes, rice, macaroni or similar foods, you should eat less bread at that meal than you would if you were not having them.

However, there is no reason why you should not have some bread, if you want it, even if these foods are included. The idea that two kinds of starches at a meal is a bad combination, has no scientific basis. The idea probably arose because eating more than one starchy food has many times led to overeating of starch, and we know that overeating of any food is a potent cause of indigestion.

Practically all overweight people eat too much bread and butter, altogether too much. They should limit it considerably, although as I told you in the previous papers, a simple meal of bread and milk frequently is a wholesale meal for any one. (When you take nothing but the bread and milk and possibly some green vegetables and fruits with it—yes, you can take fruit with milk; n fruit is as acid as the acid in your stomach—then you can have considerably more of it and still not make your meal too high in calories.)

Our T. T. T.'s (you know 'em, the Too-Too-Thins) invariably eat too little bread (and too little of everything) and they should increase their allowance of this good and wholesome food—especially wholesome if made with milk and of the "whole wheat" flour, and less wholesome if made of the white flour, but still a good energy food if made with milk; and if plenty of fruits, vegetables and milk are eaten. Milk is the best single food with which to supplement bread.

The department of Physiological Chemistry, Cookery and Nutrition at Teachers' College, Columbia University, has been working toward the problem of making a more nutritious white bread. It has found that by using milk powder instead of milk, more of the milk solids can be incorporated into the bread. Since butter is usually eaten with bread, the department finds that skim milk powder fills the requirements.

The following is a recipe which was developed at the college laboratories. If you do your home baking and prefer white bread use this recipe:

Flour, 7 cups; water, 2 cups; sugar, 2 tablespoons; lard, 2 tablespoons; yeast, 2 cakes; salt, 3 teaspoons; skim milk powder, 1 1-3 cups.

Those inclined to gout, with very few exceptions, are overweight and should cut down very markedly on their bread and other energy foods. Those inclined to muscular pains, gout, diabetes and hyperacid stomachs, usually are overweight, too, and they should cut down on their bread intake for the same reason. Another reason fo lessening their supply is that breads and cereals, with sugars, meats and eggs, belong in the acid for ng foods. We have to remember that we need acid forming foods as well as the alkaline foods, but the preponderance should be on the alkaline side—milk, vegetables and fruits (with the exception of plums, cranberries and prunes), so that the blood and tissue fluids which are normally slightly alkaline can retain that reaction.

"Scotch: I would appreciate a recipe for Wholewheat Bread."

Answer: Wholewheat Bread: Into a large bowl put two cups of scalded sweet milk, one-fourth cup of granulated sugar and one teaspoon of salt; let cool till the milk is luke-warm, then add one cake of compressed yeast which has been dissolved in one-fourth cup of luke-warm water. Also add three cups of wholewheat flour and beat well; add one and one-third cups more of whole-wheat flour, stir vigorously, and cover the bowl with two clean cloths. Set it in a warm place for five hours, or till the dough is double in bulk.

Now, without turning it out onto a bread board, as one does in making white bread, merely scrape half of it into one greased bread pan and the other half into another pan. Cover these pans and place them in a warm place for perhaps an hour, or till the dough is again double in bulk. Bake for forty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

Young Housewife: "How is one to make blacking stay on a steel-topped range?"

Answer: Never try to black a steel-topped range. Nothing will stay on it, and nothing is supposed to stay on it. Simply clean the steel with the finest grade of steel wool, which you can buy at any grocer's or hardware store. This is all the care it needs.

Mrs. E. S.: "Kindly print a recipe for baking powder tea biscuits."

Answer: Baking powder manufacturers always print an excellent recipe on the paper cover of their cans. But here is another good one: Tea Biscuits: With two knives (held together as if they were a pair of scissors) cut one heaping tablespoon of butter into one quart of bread flour which you have previously sifted with three tablespoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, and one tablespoon of sugar. Add one-half pint of cold, sweet milk and mix well (it will make a soft dough). Then turn the mass out onto a slightly floured board and roll lightly to about three-fourths of an inch in thickness. Cut out with a tin cutter and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven, on a greased pan—possibly less.

Tomorrow—Canning Tomatoes Whole

ANSWERS TO LETTERS

L. S.—A. B. C.—When using henna to tint the stray grey hairs and not change the natural shade of the hair, mix the henna with the soapy suds and then rub all of it through the hair. Let it remain on the hair from five to 20 minutes, and then proceed as with any ordinary shampoo.

You will have to experiment to find out how long you will need to leave the henna on the hair in order to tint it sufficiently.

A Reader—Try an astringent such as witch hazel, or a few drops of benzoin in a quart of water, to lighten the skin again; and you had better never massage if you cannot help being strenuous in your efforts. Whenever the skin is dry or feels drawn apply a little olive or almond oil by using the tips of your fingers, and keep to gentle strokes without any attempt to massage the tissues.

A. B. C.—If you measured up to the right standard of health, your wrists and hands would not be extremely thin, neither would your lips be pale. You probably are in need of a good tonic, one with iron in it that will enrich your blood.

There is always some physical reason for nails being brittle, especially so when a person is as young as you are. If you build up your health everything will be corrected. Meantime, feed plenty of oil into the nails and continue with your exercises.

Gladys—During the years of growth any overweight should not be taken too seriously; a few more years will usually mean completed development, and in many cases less weight than formerly, with general improvement in every way. You seem to eat properly and are taking enough exercise, so there is nothing for you to do at this time.

M. H.—You should consult the doctor about the enlarged veins in your hands. The excessive perspiration of hands, feet, and arms, indicates a run-down state of health.

You will not be able to cure the bunion yourself, but you can prevent its becoming worse if you relieve the pressure on it.

It would pay you to have a chiropodist look after your bunion. A bunion may be cured in the early stage, whereas, if allowed to go until the injury to the joint may result there will be no cure for it at all. If it aches, or is very sore, and you cannot get to a chiropodist, try painting it with iodine for a day or two.

Paul S.—If you consult a skin specialist he will tell you if the pox mark can be removed.

L. C.—Continue to close pores by using very cold water after bathing your face. Several times a week rub ice over the part where the pores are enlarged.

Tomorrow—Fallen Arches

The HOUSE Of The ARROW

A SERIAL STORY WRITTEN BY A. E. W. MASON

Protected By The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

"This is Mr. Frobisher, my solicitor in London," said Betty as she presented Jim.

The commissary, Monsieur Girardot, was a stout, bald, middle-aged man with a pair of folding glasses sitting upon a prominent fat nose; his secretary, Maurice Thevenet, was a tall, good-looking novice in the police administration, a trifle flashy in his appearance, and in his own esteem, one would gather, rather a conqueror among the fair.

"I have asked Monsieur Bex, Mademoiselle's notary in Dijon, to be present," said Jim.

"That is quite in order," replied the commissary, and Monsieur Bex was at that moment announced. He came on the very moment of three. The clock was striking as he bowed in the doorway. Everything was just as it should be. Monsieur Bex was pleased.

"With Monsieur le Commissaire's consent," he said, smiling, "we can now proceed with the final ceremonies of this affair."

"We wait for Monsieur Hanaud," said the commissary.

"Hanaud?"

"Hanaud of the surete of Paris, who has been invited by the examining magistrate to take charge of this case," the commissary explained.

"Case?" cried Monsieur Bex in perplexity. "But there is no case for Hanaud to take charge of"; and Betty Harlowe drew him a little aside.

While she gave the little notary some rapid summary of the incidents of the morning, Jim went out of the room into the hall in search of Hanaud. He saw him at once; but to his surprise Hanaud came forward from the back of the hall as if he had entered the house from the garden.

"I sought you in the dining room," he said, pointing to the door of that room which certainly was at the back of the house behind the library, with its entrance behind the staircase. "We will join the others."

Hanaud was presented to Monsieur Bex.

"And this gentleman?" asked Hanaud, bowing slightly to Thevenet.

"My secretary, Maurice Thevenet," said the commissary, in a loud undertone, "a charming youth, of an intelligence which is surprising. He will go far."

Hanaud looked at Thevenet with a friendly interest. The young recruit gazed at the great man with kindling eyes.

"This will be an opportunity for me, Monsieur Hanaud, by which, if I do not profit, I prove myself of no intelligence at all," he said with a formal modesty which quite went to the heart of Monsieur Bex.

"That is very correct," said he.

Hanaud for his part was never averse to flattery. He cocked an eye at Jim Frobisher; he shook the secretary warmly by the hand.

"Then don't hesitate to ask me questions, my young friend," he answered. "I am Hanaud now, yes. But I was once young Maurice Thevenet without, alas! his good looks."

Maurice Thevenet blushed with the most becoming diffidence.

"That is very kind," said Monsieur Bex.

"This looks like growing into a friendly little family party," Jim Frobisher thought, and he quite welcomed a "Hum" and a "Ha" from the commissary.

He moved to the center of the room.

"We, Girardot, commissaire of police, will now remove the seals," he said pompously.

He led the way from the library across the hall and along the corridor to the wide door of Mrs. Harlowe's bedroom. He broke the seals and removed the bands. Then he took a key from the hand of his secretary and opened the door upon a shuttered room. The little company of people surged forward. Hanaud stretched out his arms and barred the way.

"Just for a moment, please!" he ordered and over his shoulder Jim Frobisher had a glimpse of the room which made him shiver.

This morning in the garden some thrill of the chase had made him for a moment eager that Hanaud should press on, that development should follow upon development until somewhere a criminal stood exposed. Since the hour, however, which he had spent upon the Tower of the Terrace, all thought of the chase appalled him and he waited for developments in fear. This bedroom mistily lit by a few stray threads of daylight which pierced through the chinks of the shutters, cold and silent and mysterious, was for him peopled with phantoms, whose faces no one could see, who struggled dimly in the shadows. Then Hanaud and the commissary crossed to the windows opposite, opened them and flung back the shutters. The clear bright light flooded every corner in an instant and brought to Jim Frobisher relief. The room was swept and clean, the chairs ranged against the wall, the bed flat and covered with an embroidered spread; everywhere there was order; it was as empty of suggestion as a vacant bedroom in a hotel.

Hanaud looked about him.

"Yes," he said. "This room stood open for a week after Madame's funeral. It would have been a miracle if we discovered anything which could help us."

He went to the bed, which stood with its head against the wall midway between the door and the windows. A small flat stand with a button on enamel lay upon the round table by the bed-side, and from the stand a cord ran down by the table leg and disappeared under the carpet.

"This is the bell into what was the maid's bedroom, I suppose," he said, turning towards Betty.

"Yes."

Hanaud stooped and minutely examined the cord. But there was no sign that it had ever been tampered with. He stood up again.

"Mademoiselle, will you take Monsieur Girardot into Jeanne Baudin's bedroom and close the door? I shall press this button, and you will know whether the bell rings while we here shall be able to assure ourselves whether sounds made in one of the rooms would be heard in the other."

"Certainly."

Betty took the commissary of police away, and a few seconds later those in Mrs. Harlowe's room heard a door close in the corridor.

"Will you shut our door now, if you please?" Hanaud requested.

Bex, the notary, closed it.

"Now, silence, if you please!"

Hanaud pressed the button, and not a sound answered him. He pressed it again and again with the same result. The commissary returned to the bedroom.

"Well?" Hanaud asked.

"It rang twice," said the commissary.

Hanaud shrugged his shoulders with a laugh.

"And an electric bell has a shrill, penetrating sound," he cried. "Name of a name, but they built good houses when the Maison Grenelle was built! Are the cupboards and drawers open?"

He tried one and found it locked. Monsieur Bex came forward.

"All the drawers were locked on the morning when Madame Harlowe's death was discovered. Mademoiselle Harlowe herself locked them in my presence and handed to me the keys for the purpose of making an inventory. Mademoiselle was altogether correct in so doing. For until the funeral had taken place the terms of the will were not disclosed."

"But afterwards, when you took the inventory you must have unlocked them."

"I have not yet begun the inventory, Monsieur Hanaud. There were the arrangements for the funeral, a list of the properties to be made for valuation, and the vineyards to be administrated."

"Oho," cried Hanaud alertly. "Then these wardrobes and cupboards and drawers should hold exactly what they held on the night of April 27." He ran quickly about the room trying a door here, a drawer there, and came to a stop beside a cupboard fashioned in the thickness of the wall. "The trouble is that a child with a bent wire could unlock any one of them. Do you know what Madame Harlowe kept in this, Monsieur Bex?" and Hanaud rapped with his knuckles upon the cupboard door.

"No, I have no idea. Shall I open it?" and Bex produced a bunch of keys from his pocket.

"Not for the moment, I think," said Hanaud.

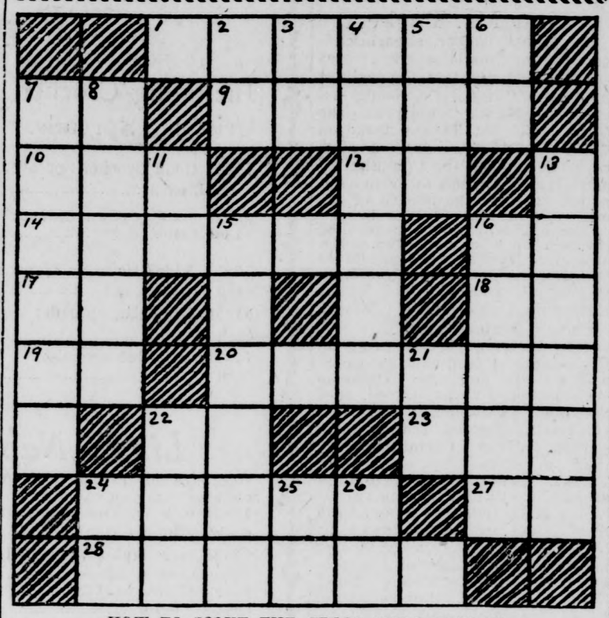
CROSS WORD PUZZLE

COMPILED FOR GLENDALE EVENING NEWS READERS

Copyright, 1925, By The George Matthew Adams Service



HOW TO SOLVE THE CROSS WORD PUZZLE

The way to solve the Cross Word Puzzle is to fill in the white squares of the diagram with the words which agree with the accompanying definitions. The definitions are numbered to correspond with the numbers on the diagram.

Any word defined in the text under "HORIZONTAL" will begin at its number, shown on the diagram, and will extend all the way across to the first black space to the right of that number. That is, the word must begin in the square that contains its identifying number, and extend as far as the white squares continue uninterruptedly.

Any word defined under "VERTICAL" will also begin in the white space that contains its number, but will extend downward as far as the white spaces remain uninterruptedly.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE GREEN APPLES

The Fuzzy Fox sat in the doorway of his den, running his red tongue over his sharp, white teeth, and he wondered what he was going to have for supper that night. Suddenly he heard a rustling in the bushes, and he crouched down and began slinking along, thinking he might pounce upon Jimmie Wibblewobble, the duck, or Charlie Chick, the little rooster chap.

But, instead, out of the bushes stalked the Woozie Wolf. He, too, was running his red tongue over his white teeth, wondering what he was going to have for supper.

"Oh!" barked the Fox as he looked at the Wolf. "It's you; is it?"

"Yes, it's me," growled the Wolf, speaking ungrammatical like but effective. "Who did you suppose it was?"

"I thought it was Uncle Wiggily," answered the Fox. "If I could get hold of his ears I wouldn't need to wonder any more what I would eat for supper."

"I subscribe to those sentiments!" growled the Wolf. "No; this is a warm, lazy afternoon. That rabbit may be asleep out in the fields where he has gone adventuring. Let's see if we can catch him."

"That suits me!" said the Fox. So, together, the two bad chaps started slinking off back of the bushes and behind the big rocks.

Now, as it happened, Uncle Wiggily was in the fields just then. The rabbit gentleman had started from his hollow stump bungalow and had gone to meet some of the forty 'leven little bunny rabbits coming from school. For with his new wife many little bunnies had come to Mr. Longears.

All along the way from his hollow stump bungalow Uncle Wiggily had twinkled his pink nose and he was laughing as he thought of the fun he would have when he met his wife's little bunnies.

"I suppose I'll have a little trouble, too," thought the rabbit uncle and daddy. "They are always playing tricks on me—those little tykes, like Jinkle and Jangle and Tooter and Scooter and Skipper and Nipper."

Mr. Longears looked across the field and saw where the little bunny boys and girls were gathered under a tree on which grew many green apples. Jingle and Jangle and all the others were gathering green apples, some of which had fallen to the ground, while the bunny boys and girls were knocking green apples off the branches by throwing sticks and stones up at them.

"Oh, that must never be!" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "If the little rabbits eat green apples they will be made ill and I'll have to call Dr. Possum!"

So, as quickly as he could Uncle Wiggily hopped across the field and picking up all the green apples on the ground, he put them in his pockets. Those he couldn't stuff in his pockets he put in his tall, silk hat. And whenever he saw a little boy or girl bunny with a green apple, he took it away.

"Oh, Daddycums! Stop! Don't do that! give us back our nice green apples!" cried Spooter and Tooter and Skipper and Nipper and all the others. "Give us the green apples!"

"No, No!" answered Uncle Wiggily. "Green apples are bad for little rabbits!" And just then the Fox and Wolf came slinking along. They saw what a commotion there was when Uncle Wiggily took away the green apples, and the Wolf whispered:

"Now is our chance to catch that rabbit gentleman!"

"Yes! And nibble his ears!" said the Fox.

But as the two bad chaps rushed out of the bushes to jump on the bunny gentleman, Mr. Longears saw them. And pulling the hard, green apples from his pocket he threw them at the Fox and Wolf, hitting them on their noses. And Uncle Wiggily cried:

"Green apples are bad for my little rabbits, but they are good for you two biters!" And he pelted the unpleasant creatures so hard with the fruit, and the little rabbits, taking the green apples out of their new daddy's hat, tossed so many of them at the Fox and Wolf that those two chaps were glad enough to run back to their dens.

"Fooled again!" they growled, as they went to bed without any supper. But Uncle Wiggily and the little bunnies had good clover pancakes to eat, and Mr. Longears told his little boys and girls never to nibble green apples, which they promised not to do.

"We'll save them to throw at the Fox and Wolf," said Skipper. And if the eye of the needle doesn't try to read the paper of pins, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the rag doll.

FIREMEN DEFEAT CREAMERY CREW

Triple Steal By Milkmen Adds Thrills To Game; Score 15 to 5

By A. S. HALL
Of The Evening News Staff.

The Firemen walloped the Glendale Creamery, 15 to 5, in a Twilight league game at the Broadway High school grounds yesterday afternoon, but the game was not such a one-sided affair as the score would indicate. There were plenty of thrills, and unusual plays, and the fact that the smoke-eaters ran bases like they answer fire alarms did not distract from the game.

O. White started on the mound for the Glendale Creamery team. After he had walked two men, allowed one hit, another man safe on error, and fanned two in a row, he was yanked in favor of Hursley. The fire fighters lit on Hursley with a smaching welcome, and before the third man could be put out, they had collected five hits and seven runs off him. White went back into the box at the start of the second inning and pitched real ball.

The firemen set a new league record for runs in one inning when they gathered eleven in the first. Seventeen men faced the two pitchers during the inning, although there were only twelve legal times at bat charged. Three men walked and two were hit by a pitched ball.

The milkmen's heavy inning was the second, when they collected four runs with two hits. The other score made by the creamery lads came in the fifth, when three hits were collected.

White got six strike-outs to his credit, while Eves gathered the same number. White walked four men, Hursley walked one and Eves walked three. Eves unintentionally "beaned" White both times he was up, while White hit Hodges and Eves.

A snappy double play in the fifth inning added thrills. Philp was on second, Hodges was on first, and one man was down. Thomas flied out to H. Malloy, who threw to O. Malloy, who relayed the ball to Marotz, catching Philp off second.

Another real thrill was a triple steal pulled by the creamery crew in the second. Carter hit through the box, and went to second on Nordstrom's error. Jordan walked. Both advanced one base on a balk. O. Malloy flied out to Nordstrom. O. White was hit by pitched ball. With the bases loaded, O. White started for second. Eves threw the ball to Rockwell. Carter started for home and Jordan started for third. Rockwell couldn't figure out the play, and became confused when catcher, second baseman and third baseman all started yelling for the ball. As a result, all three men were safe.

Efforts are being made to get the Huli Trucks and the Postoffice employes together for a game this afternoon. These two teams played a 14 to 14 tie game on June 9, the time limit of 7 o'clock being reached before the full four innings were played.

The regular scheduled game for this afternoon, Radios vs. Hull Trucks, has been switched to Friday by agreement of both managers. Tomorrow the Calla Lily and Public Service crews will play.

JOHN B. FOSTER'S VIEWS

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The southpaw pitching menace against which managers labored fretfully and fitfully in 1924, which pursued them with ferocious mien this spring, has been "laid."

With the exception of Leonard and Ruether in the American league and Bentley and Rixey in the National league, the left-handers have been getting considerable of a buffetting.

In the National, pitchers like Marquard, who has skill even if he is experienced and elderly; Nehf, Benton, Yde, Cooper and Mitchell; can't get off the ways. Some of them have reputations as stars. All of them are left-handers who were presumed to be the southpaw cornerstones of the teams to which they belong.

Bentley leads the southpaw brigade, but Bentley has to be nursed to be successful. He never did meet all comers and he probably never will, although he is a marvel against certain teams.

Next to Bentley comes Rixey, who has won seven games and lost four for the Reds. That is about his normal speed and he is likely to maintain the pace. If the Cincinnati team continues to do as well as it has been doing since it got a first baseman, Rixey is likely to go down in history as having done his full share for the club.

Cooper has been pretty much what was predicted at Chicago—a failure. He never could be happy pitching in a short-fence field like that of the Cubs. He has to let the boys swat the ball and rely on the infielders to gather them in.

The American league southpaws are doing a little better than those of the National, but they are unduly alarming the teams they go up against.

The much-rested Dutch Leonard leads them and but for him the Detroits might be wandering in the vale of desperation. Ruether must be given second place on his work thus far, with Wingard and Groves, the latter that much lambasted investment of Connie Mack, coming after. But none of them except Leonard has shown himself a meteor.

Smith, Walberg, Zachary, Mogridge, Cvengros, Gregg, Baumgartner and Danforth are staggering to break even. So, too, is Pennock.

Whitehill, the young wonder of 1924 for Detroit, is just beginning to show signs of awakening and Shaute, the Cleveland Piute of 1924 has been slammed and banged until he must feel as if he has been stepped on by an elephant.

Coincident with the fact that the left hand pitchers are getting it in the thorax is the fact that the right-hand batters are hammering the ball hard. it works both ways.

The very best pitching performance this year in any league, is that of Young Gray, of the Athletics, a right-hander. He Walter Johnson, Coveleskie and the ancient Quinn of Boston, are setting on the throne seats in the American league, with a bunch of successful right-handers a mile long in the National.

WALLOP INDIANS

The Athletics buried Speaker. They buried him and his Indians under a thirteen run rally in the eighth, the greatest in the history of Philadelphia baseball, and won 17 to 15. Simmons' homer with two on was the blow that broke the Indians' tomahawk.

BRAVES BEATEN

The Cubs made it five in a row by defeating the Braves 8 to 4, Jones pitching fine ball until the ninth when he let down and the Braves scored thrice.

BENNY LEONARD TO MEET MICKEY

Kearns And Gibson Reported Busy Discussing Bout, Perhaps In August

By DAVIS J. WALSH
For International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Formal announcement was expected today that within a matter of weeks Benny Leonard has thought better of his hasty retirement from the wholesale and retail glove business. Following a series of protracted conferences between Jack Kearns and Billy Gibson, it was thought that the deliberations of these great minds had to do with a proposed Dempsey-Tunney meeting, but it developed today that the matter under discussion was a bout between Leonard and Mickey Walker in August. Gibson, it is understood, has said that Leonard will play along when the time comes.

Non-active professionally for almost a year, Benny has kept himself in condition at his gym, where the tired business man may get his rest by running twenty laps around the track. The young man is said to be as sound physically as ever he was.

His mother, given credit in the record books for the decision over Benny that prompted his retirement from the lightweight division and the ring in general, is also alleged to have been won over to the proposition. She can buy a lot of mental security with the quarter million that is believed will fall into Leonard's lap as a result of the match.

A Tunney-Wills bout has also been planned as the big shot of the 1925 outdoor season. It will fill any promoter with joy and the seats with cash customers. It is one of those affairs that needs no smoke-up, no ballyhoo, no megaphone.

It is such a form-fitting transaction, in fact, that apparently Messrs Kearns and Gibson have wasted little thought on Leonard's attitude.

"He's a business man," Kearns said today with a significant wink.

He and Gibson, it seems, have gotten so far ahead of the proposition that they are haggling over hte division of the purse. Both think they are entitled to the biggest drag and only a gradual modification of this laudable idea will bring them to an amicable conclusion.

This will probably take the form of a 50-50 split of approximately a half million dollars.

XLVII—Mountain of Health

The people of Glendale have access to a regular mountain of health. The Verdugo mountain has got more health to the square inch than any other place in California.

The main advantage of exercise is that it causes a person to breathe more air into the lungs, thereby burning up more poison contained in the blood, which means purifying that great vital source of body repair material. There is exercise a-plenty to be had by most any person able to walk.

There are resting places by the dozens for those who need to use them until they gain strength enough to climb the mountain without a rest.

Climbing in hot weather will do more good than cool weather as we perspire more freely and rid the body of more waste material in a shorter length of time, and less exertion is required at the start.

It is better to try climbing with an empty stomach. It may bother the first time or two but you will have more strength to climb with and feel much better after the first two or three attempts. One or two oranges will be found sufficient to relieve a feeling of false hunger felt in the stomach.

I climb this mountain every Sunday morning and will be glad to have many more climb with me. There are a number of experimenters accompany me regularly, so any one can get all the exercise and information on health they have any use for by appearing at the foot of the Verdugo mountain on Brand boulevard, at 7:30 o'clock every Sunday morning.

Women are especially invited as Mrs. Fry is a hiker that can hold her own with lots of the good ones, and her advice is worth listening to when any one is seeking information about health.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Inside information shows Harry Greb to be in the condition of his life. In past few months he has been using the best possible method of conditioning, that is, fighting himself into shape.

Jack Kearns, wiliest of all managers, it is said, liked that Greb-Walker match about as much as he would like two infected toes instead of the one that Mickey is reported to possess. To hook up with a champion who has a Greb date hanging to him is not Kearn's idea of a soft situation. And they say that the great idea back in Kearns' mind is a bout between Walker and Benny Leonard.

Dapper Jack is no piker. When he starts after something, that something has got to be big and if it isn't big at the start, he may be relied upon to improve its stature.

Leonard is getting ready for a big money bout, that is getting his mind made up to take the plunge, and the advantages he possesses in this respect is that he stands with Dempsey as the two boxers in this country who can draw the crowd.

If Greb were to slap Walker here and there throughout fifteen rounds and win a decision, it would not help the prospects of his meeting Leonard.

Well, what will Kearns and Mickey do about it The future is rife with possibilities. Of course, one of the possibilities is that Walker will go through with his projected match with Greb and knock him for a loop. Or he may go into the ring and be well slapped. Nobody knows just what will happen. But, when you come down to it, the uncertainties of life are what make life interesting.

MANY STATES TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS

Economic Conference In Los Angeles Will Plan For Southwest Growth

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—With acceptances received from more than 150 civic and business organizations scattered through California, Arizona, Utah and Nevada, one of the biggest movements ever set under way for booming the southwest got into action yesterday, with the calling to order of the Southwest Economic conference in the banquet hall of the Chamber of Commerce building.

Each of the governors of the four states is represented at the conference and chambers of commerce and other organizations in all of the principal cities in the states concerned, announced that they have one or more representatives.

Representatives of the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe are taking an active part in the meet, transportation problems involving shipping and rates being one of the important matters which will be brought before the assembled conference.

Is Non-Political

Although the conference is non-political and has been called by President Pridham of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce to take up only those problems of economics, solutions of which are necessary to continue the development of the hinterland of the southwest and the Pacific slope which feeds Los Angeles harbor, it is generally believed that the gathering will undoubtedly make a move toward untangling some of the snarls in the Colorado river situation.

From the program of speakers who will appear during the three days the conference is in session here, it is shown that practically every issue vital to the development of any big territory will be brought into the conference for hearing.

Markets on Program

Carlyle Thorpe, general manager of the California Walnut Growers' association and conceded one of the eminent agricultural authorities of the southwest, has accepted an invitation to address the gathering on "Agricultural Marketing Problems of the Southwest." Charles F. Stern, president of the Pacific Southwest Trust & Savings bank in Los Angeles, was one of the principal speakers on the program on the opening day of the conference. J. A. H. Kerr, vice-president of the Security Trust & Savings bank of this city, is also on the program schedule for an address on bankers' problems.

With a brief review of the strides already made in the development of industries in the states concerned in the conference, R. E. Tulley, general manager of the United Verde Copper Co. of Jerome, Ariz., is expected to bring forth important suggestions for continuing this development in an address which he has agreed to make.

President R. W. Pridham, of the Los Angeles chamber, is presiding at the conference and will introduce the speakers. The chamber entertained the delegates at a luncheon at the Biltmore hotel on the first day.

Senator Charles S. Sprague heads the delegation from that state, coming as the representative of the governor, and W. F. Jensen attends the conference as the delegate for Utah's governor. P. G. Spilsbury, manager of the Arizona Industrial conference of Phoenix, heads the delegates from Arizona.

Grade New Highway Verdugo to Glendale

A large crew is at work, under the supervision of Bert Kartz, road superintendent for the Los Angeles county road department, grading and paving South Los Angeles avenue and the new Tujunga boulevard, from the center of Verdugo City to the intersection of Canada boulevard and Verdugo road. The many oak trees on either side of the boulevard and the excellent view of the Verdugo foothills will make this thoroughfare a picture full of charm and beauty. This boulevard will also shorten the distance from Verdugo City and Tujunga to Glendale about three-quarters of a mile.

DECLARES CHINA IS NO GOLCONDA

Resources Are Exaggerated Says Speaker at Round Table's Luncheon

Mineral, water power and forest resources of China have been grossly exaggerated; especially the mining, declared Arthur C. Terrill, A. M., E. M., 340 West Lexington drive, in an address before the Knights of the Round Table, Tuesday at luncheon.

"This is particularly true of mining resources in China," said Mr. Terrill, who has been head of the mining department at Pei-Yang university, Tientsin, for four years, and now with Pasadena Tech. "The wonderful resources mentioned in books and news dispatches do not exist.

"Too optimistic reports on wonderful mining resources of China probably had much to do with Germany's attack on Shantung and with our staying out of the League of Nations."

Plan Picnic Dinner

Dr. L. L. Crane, presided at the luncheon which was held in the Egyptian Village cafe. Plans were made for a picnic dinner to be held next Tuesday night at the home of J. T. Edwards, 5100 San Fernando road. Knights were called on by the chairman to introduce various members of the Round Table, those failing being required to "grease the skillet." Ernest Osgood was named chairman of a committee to obtain information relative to adoption of badges for use in meetings as a means of general introduction.

The Glendale Music club's 1925-26 program was called to attention of the doners, as also was the drive for membership now under way.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Herman Powell of Santa Ana, organizer of the Round Table. Mr. Terrill opened his talk with a paragraph in Chinese dialect, to the surprise of the Knights who confessed inability to follow him closely.

Hankow, scene of present Chinese troubles, is the Chicago of China, said Mr. Terrill.

Trouble May Result

"If attempt is made to seize the foreign settlements, there is sure to be serious trouble," he said.

"Foreign investments in China are enormous. Shanghai is said to be second to New York in value of shipping. China as a whole is a great danger spot. There are people rated as humanitarians, who dislike seeing physical suffering. A second class is indifferent to it. The Chinese, many of them are a third class who take pleasure in inflicting suffering, and this fact makes those who know China, shudder at the possibilities whenever trouble arises there.

See Few Foreigners

"In western China where some mines are located, the natives had never seen a foreigner until I went there and I am sure they will see no more for years now.

"China has more coal resources than any other Pacific country, but per capita, only 100 tons for the Chinese. Yet we read there is enough coal there to supply the world for 2000 years. We have 23,000 tons of coal per capita in the ground in this country.

"Incidentally California has a coal property. Not many people know that."

The members voted to adopt a black and gold sash as part of the Spanish costume to be worn by members. Louis Oneal, state president, will attend a meeting of Exchange club presidents at the Egyptian Village cafe tonight, it was announced. Dr. T. R. Noehle outlined plans for a Spanish picnic to be held in the near future.

John W. Worthington Is Mysteriously Missing

died, the Chicago broker became seriously ill and rapidly lost strength. For a time his body was swollen to large proportions and was said by physicians to contain a great surplus of water.

While in the sanitarium, sensational charges that Worthington had been a silent partner in a brokerage house in Los Angeles known as Ballantine & Co., were made by the district attorney and a complaint charging Worthington and S. F. Ballantine, a former Texas promoter, with embezzlement and larceny was issued. More than $50,000 was reported to have been lost by investors in offerings of the brokerage house.

Worthington was brought into the $2,500,000 St. Louis mail robbery case when he attempted to borrow money at a Beverly Hills bank on some of the bonds alleged to have been stolen. The first loan was made and the bonds returned to him when he repaid it a short time later, but a second loan was not repaid and the bank disposed of the bonds.

In January, 1924, one of the bonds was in possession of James W. Shaw of Chicago. Shaw declared to postoffice inspectors that it was given him as a "gift" by Worthington. The federal grand jury has been investigating his supposed connection with the mail robbery, but because it was believed he was "safely" within reach in a bed at the local sanitarium it has not rushed the probe, it is said.

PROTESTS SHOOTING

HANKOW, June 16.—The Chinese commissioner of foreign affairs today protested the shooting of eight Chinese in connection with rioting about the British concession.

NEW YORK CLOSING

By W. S. COUSINS
For International News Service

NEW YORK, June 16.—The principal speculative markets exhibited the usual summer dullness today. Professional traders wandered around the stock market, first giving their attention to the specialty stocks and utilities, then the oil stocks, and finally the rails. The bulls had a comfortable array of favorable market features, including the evidence that money for speculative purposes is flowing in a steady stream to New York.

Sales for the first three hours were considerably below the average of the last week or two Transactions dribbled through in 100-share lots, with practically none of the block buying which featured the recent report of the utility, motor and oil stocks.

Oil shares were lower and motor shares, with the exception of Pierce-Arrows, also marched down the hill.

Both individually and collectively, the reports from the transportation industry were favorable. A move in the railroad stocks shortly after the noon period resulted in a gain of 2 points for Great Northern preferred; 2 for Chicago & Northwestern; 1 for the Soo Line; 2½ for Northern Pacific; 2 for Rock Island; 1 for St. Paul common and preferred; 1½ for Union Pacific.

Buying demand continued in electric light and power, American Waterworks, Sears-Roebuck and numerous other specialty stocks to which speculative attention was called for one reason or another. Bullish pools stirred up a few of the industrial leaders, like American Can and Baldwin; rubber and tire shares returned to the active list, with good buying of United States Rubber, Goodrich, Ajax, etc. Sugar stocks sold higher in the forenoon, but failed to retain the interest of the speculative community.

United States Steel was a failure as a market leader, easily dropping back from 117¼ to its opening price of 116⅛. Mack Trucks was in demand around the highest prices for the current movement.

Local traction stocks and bonds enjoyed a brief boom as the result of the trend of developments in the New York transit situation Stocks of the Interborough Rapid Transit, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit and Third Avenue Railway sold from 1 to 3 points higher, while the bonds of the same companies gained a point or two in that section of the market.

Industrial and specialty stocks spurted to higher levels in the last hour as bearish traders attempted to cover their short commitments. Independent Oil & Gas, Cast Iron Pipe and American Safety Razor, the so-called Durant stocks, were prominent in the closing rally.

Strength in cotton, which sold up 45 points, was also a feature of the late trading in that market. Grains closed lower.

Sales today, 1,112,700 shares; bonds, $14,226,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 16.—Grains were lower at the close here today. Wheat closed 2½@3¾c off; corn, ⅞@1⅝c off, and oats, 1⅛@1⅝c lower. Wheat see-sawed back and forth during the session brief rallies caused by short covering meeting with liquidation and gradually forcing prices down. Weak cables were factors in keeping prices easier. Provisions were easier at the close.

L. A. EXCHANGE

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Marine Oil led the trading in an active market at the session of the Los Angeles stock exchange today. The entire oil list traded well, price movements being mixed, while the mines and public utilities were moderately active.

ONCE UPON A TIME — JACK, THE GIANT KILLER---II — BY W. J. ENRIGHT

JACK MADE UP HIS MIND TO KILL THE GIANT AND GOING OUT ONE NIGHT HE DUG A DEEP HOLE AT THE FOOT OF THE MOUNT, COVERED IT WITH STICKS AND HID IT ALL WITH A SPRINKLING OF EARTH.
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate
AT DAWN HE BLEW A LOUD BLAST WITH HIS HORN WHICH WAKENED THE GIANT. CORMORAN WAS IN A GREAT RAGE AND WHEN HE SPIED JACK HE ROARED IN A VOICE LIKE THUNDER, "YOU YOUNG RASCAL I WILL PUNISH YOU FOR THAT."
AND WITH A STEP THAT SHOOK THE VERY GROUND HE CAME CRASHING DOWN THE MOUNT.
AS SOON AS HE REACHED THE BOTTOM, HOWEVER, HE STEPPED INTO JACK'S TRAP AND FELL HEAD OVER HEELS INTO THE PIT.
TO-MORROW: WHY JACK WAS NAMED THE GIANT KILLER.

What will become of your Life Insurance?

MOST estates are largely life insurance, left in a lump sum. Almost inevitably such money attracts "wonderful business opportunities," unseasoned advice, and is prey to the dangers of inexperience and mismanagement.

Ninety per cent of insurance left in bulk is completely dissipated within seven years!

If insurance is worth buying, isn't the income it should provide worth protecting?

Under a Life Insurance Trust, this company will invest and manage your insurance, carry out your instructions, pay regular income to your heirs, and ultimately dispose of the principal as directed.

This is the safe way to leave insurance —to bring the greatest benefits to those for whom you insure your life.

BARTHELMESS IN HOME LIFE FILM

Recalls Days When, As Rival Of Valentino For Honor, He Was One Chosen

In his latest First National production Richard Barthelmess is seen with his wife, Mary Hay, as his leading woman. The picture, entitled "New Toys," will be at the Cosmo theatre, South Brand and Windsor road, today for the last time. Ben Turpin is there also in "Three Foolish Weeks."

Some years ago Barthelmess and Rudolph Valentino were rivals for the role of the hero in Griffith's "Scarlet Days." Valentino had danced in a prologue in a Los Angeles theatre and had caught the eye of the director. Barthelmess had just scored a hit in "Broken Blossoms" and finally Griffith gave the coveted role to the latter. Later Valentino appeared in "The Four Horsemen" as the tango dancing Julio and became a national figure.

Following Barthelmess and Turpin at the Cosmo, Al Wilson will be seen Wednesday and Thursday in "The Cloud Rider."

Gilbert Thayer Gives Final Lecture Tonight

Gilbert Thayer, "the man who has made millions thnik," has been speaking at Hahn's auditorium. His lecture "The Greatest Crime of Civilization," is sensational because he tells the truth simply, forcefully, with the conviction of a man who has had experience, gleaned from the four corners of the globe.

Dr. Thayer will deliver the last of this series of lectures tonight at 8 o'clock at Hahn's auditorium, 109 North Brand boulevard. A question box is conducted immediately following the lectures. Everyone is invited to write a question pertaining to the subject. Dr. Thayer has delivered 360 series of lectures to packed houses in New York city, 200 in Chicago and since coming to California has delivered two series at Trinity auditorium in Los Angeles.

It is declared that a county water district is the most feasible of all the plans which have been submitted to the property owners, and plans to that end are under way. The Verdugo City Association of Commerce requests all property owners and voters in the Crescenta Mutual Water district to be present at this meeting.

Mirthful

Reginald Denny and Margaret Livingston in "I'll Show You the Town," now appearing at the Glendale theatre.

In a comedy bubbling with fresh and novel situations, Reginald Denny will be seen for the last times today at the Glendale theatre in his latest release, "I'll Show You the Town," a Universal feature. Having none of the customary comedy hokum, "I'll Show You the Town" is a racy, romantic love story of an unromantic college professor whose only interest in life is the completion of his dissertation on evolution.

Circumstances constantly arise which prevent Alec Dupress, played by Reginald Denny, from carrying on his monumental work. One of the circumstances which arise is the basis for the many funny situations of Elmer Davis' rollicking story from which this production is adapted.

Promises Three Women

Alec was quick to promise and quick to perform. Hardly aware of the fact himself Alec had promised three women to show them the sights of the town the same night, though each separately; neither of the women to be aware of the others' existence.

Denny is supported by a strong cast including Marian Nixon, Cissy Fitzgerald, Lilyan Tashman, Hayden Stevenson, Edward Kimball, Margaret Livingston, Neely Edwards and others.

GLORIA APPEARS IN DOUBLE ROLE

Actress Deserts Washtubs to Become Duchess In Days Of Napoleon In Play

The final showings of the Paramount picture, "Madame Sans Gene," starring Gloria Swanson, which opened a three days' run last Sunday at the Gateway theatre, will take place there today.

"Madame Sans Gene" is based on the French stage success by Victorien Sardou and Emile Moreau and has to do with a flirtatious little French laundress, who becomes a duchess and a power behind the throne of France in the days of Napoleon.

Charles de Roche heads the supporting cast.

"Too Many Kisses," a Paramount picture starring Richard Dix," opens tomorrow.

In running away from women in general, he runs right into the most beautiful girl he has ever seen.

We Sponsor the Memorial Hall Bond Election June 16, 1925

—BECAUSE—

1—Our soldiers and sailors—the men and women who offered and gave their lives in all America's wars—are worthy the modest memorial planned.

2.—The hall will provide a center and school for patriotism, an efficient aid to the children's schools which we earnestly support. It will provide a home for any and all service organizations desiring to use it. At present almost all such societies meet here, there, and anywhere they can, rent and overhead holding down their membership and funds needed for civic and patriotic endeavors.

3.—Glendale is one of the very few cities similar in size and ambition which has not erected an adequate token of appreciation to its veterans.

4.—The memorial—neither ornate nor luxurious but substantial and serviceable—will be built, owned and controlled by the city and located where city authorities may determine.

5.—The American Legion, true to its promise, is turning in the site voted them two years ago to be used or sold as may be deemed best. The Patriotic and Memorial Hall association, if made custodian of the memorial, plans to maintain and care for it.

6.—The cost is ridiculously small in proportion to the great benefits to be derived from this great civic asset. To the average taxpayer—less than "a pint of ic cream per year."

7.—Because we know the people did not forget their sons and daughters during the trying days of war and steadfastly believe they will not forget them now.

—VOTE YES FOR THE MEMORIAL BONDS—

CHAIRMAN OF ASSOCIATION MAKES FINAL APPEAL

Fellow citizens of Glendale: We have tried to call to your attention the numerous reasons why Glendale should have a worthwhile memorial, dedicated to those who have served the nation in its hours of need and peril. The cause now hangs in the balance.

The zero hour has arrived! Are we going over the top?

The last minute is fast approaching—the polls close for us at 7 o'clock tonight. The minute-men at Lexington won undying fame. This association urges you to be a minute-man for the Memorial. Go to the polls at once and vote! Exercise your right and fulfill your duty as patriotic American citizens.

The 1250 members in the service societies which we represent, respectfully request you to vote "yes" on the small bond issue which means so much for the cause of patriotism and to you and to us.

You remembered us during the wars! Do not forget us now!

Honor your country, your city, yourselves and your veterans.

Vote "YES" for the Memorial Hall.

DR. WM. C. MABRY, General Chairman.

Install Modern Stock For Hardware Store

A strictly modern and complete hardware stock has been installed in the hardware store at Verdugo City, in the Fowler building, by the Charles F. Berkemeyer Co. Mr. Berkemeyer was engaged in the hardware business in Los Angeles seven years and in St. Louis, Mo., fourteen, having moved direct from Los Angeles to Verdugo City.

AT LA CRESCENTA

LA CRESCENTA, June 16.—A neat sum was realized on Saturday when the Ways and Means committee of the La Crescenta Women's club gave their last entertainment as officers for the year. The supper and barn dance were all that had been promised. About 300 persons were fed during the supper hours and more served with hot dogs and sandwiches during the later hours. Before 6 o'clock people had begun to arrive, filling the long tabes. Baked beans, scalloped potatoes, cabbage salad, baked ham, roast beef, pumpkin pie and coffee made up the menu.

The big barns of the Gould ranch were attractively decorated with masses of mountain flowers, bales of hay being placed around the walls to form the seats. Lanterns gave a typical touch to the decorations which were done by the committee. Dicky, the pet of the Slutman family, earned money for the club by being exhibited. Dicky is a little fawn found by Mr. Slutman hurt on the mountainside when very small and brought to the ranch. Dicky was nursed to health but never penned. He comes when called and romps around with the dogs.

The committee on arrangements express their appreciation to Mrs. Jessie Hansen, who loaned her piano for the occasion.

A delightful card party was given last night by members of the O. E. S. to the Masons and their wives at the Highway Highland clubroom. The guest of honor was Mrs. Evelyn Pierce of Glendale, who gave a number of readings. High honors went to Mrs. H. J. Rosendale, a box of embroidered handkerchiefs. Mr. Rodet carried off the men's consolation prize. Mr. Woodward took first honors for men, a silk tie, while Mrs. Woodward was awarded the ladies' consolation prize. A light supper was served at the close of the evening. Mr. Sliver and A. F. Hopkins furnished the prizes.

P.-T. A. reading circle will meet Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Jessie Hansen on East Piedmont avenue at 11 o'clock. The study of child training will be followed after luncheon by a lighter reading of a continued story dealing with family life. Everyone is to bring sandwiches, the hostess serving coffee.

Working day and night to finish the swimming pools, men of the Highway Highlands tract promise the "ol' swimmin' holes" will be ready for the big celebration on the Fourth, when everyone of the valley is invited to an old-fashioned time with races, games, speeches and supper. No firecrackers will be allowed.

Mrs. Blanche Hopkins is home again after spending some time in the Utley sanitarium suffering from an attack of pneumonia.

GLENDALE SANITARIUM AND HOSPITAL

At 7 o'clock tonight a delightful musical program will be given at the Sanitarium by the Misses Frances and Elizabeth Copeland, artist pupils and assistant teachers of Olga Steeb. They will play two pianos and each will contribute solo numbers. Jack Griffen, tenor, of Los Angeles will assist the young ladies. Altogether a most enjoyable concert will be given.

Saturday night the guests had a great treat. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harkness gave a sacred concert that was enjoyed by the large audience that filled the parlor. Mrs. Harkness was in wonderful voice and sang a number of her husband's compositions, while Mr. Harkness contributed several piano solos of his own composition. As an added feature Mr. Harkness and Mr. Irving Steinel played some two piano numbers, Mr. Harkness playing some impromptu variations on hymn tunes played by Mr. Steinel.

Two names gleaned from the Sanitarium register of guests will show how far the fame of Glendale is reaching. Among those registered during the past few days are Miss Mabel Langsford of Adelaide, South Australia, and H. Stafford of Boston, Mass. The patronage of the Sanitarium continues to be very good.

Fourteen Hurt, Many Have to Flee In Fire

LAWRENCE, Mass., June 16.—Explosions and fire in the heart of Lawrence's business district late yesterday destroyed $150,000 worth of property, injured fourteen firemen, drove hundreds of tenement dwellers from their homes and menaced the downtown section of the city. Seven firemen were injured when an explosion of paints and oils blew out the front of the burning building, which was a four story structure occupied by a hardware and paint firm.
